

Harry Berger and Ed. Meyer Held for Murder of Miss Bergsterman

Two Youths Arrested This Morning Admit They Attacked Dead Woman After Taking Father Home Last Monday Night and She Was Dead When They Finished With Her.

CONFESSED THIS MORNING

Taken Into Court and Their Examinations Set For Wednesday October Ninth At Ten O'clock. They Were Remanded to Jail Without Bail Charged With The Murder Of The Dead Woman

Mystery surrounding the manner in which Matilda Bergsterman met her death on the night of Monday, September 30, was cleared up in three days when Chief of Police George Appleby this morning placed under arrest Harry F. Berger and Ed. Meyer, two youths living near the Bergsterman home, and they confessed to the chief in the police station that after they had committed a statutory offense upon the woman she was dead.

The arrests were made as the result of good detective work on the part of the chief, who made inquiries as to who had gone to the Finley saloon on the night of the woman's death, and discovered that Meyer and Berger had taken Bergsterman home.

In a statement this morning the chief said: "Under the existing conditions at the time we first investigated I thought from Bergsterman's statement that he knew more than he was willing to admit. But after the doctors had expressed their opinion and told of the nature of the wounds on the woman's body, I made up my mind that Bergsterman was not responsible and began to look for some younger person.

Myers was arrested shortly after seven o'clock this morning at the store of Roesling Bros., where he was employed as a chauffeur on the motor delivery truck. Berger was taken at the factory of the Parker Pen company a little after eight o'clock, and the two young men were taken to the police station.

There Chief of Police Appleby told them that he had evidence to the effect that they had taken Bergsterman home on Monday night and had afterwards been out with Matilda Bergsterman.

He advised them that they had better tell all they had to do with the affair, or he would have to take them into court and prove them guilty from the evidence he had. They made separate confessions to the chief, the stories told by each being practically identical in every detail. Later they made statements, which were taken down in shorthand by Court Reporter Francis C. Grant, to the Chief of Police and District Attorney.

Just what the boys said in their statements, the authorities would not fully disclose beyond the fact that the story told by the one corroborated the other. In the confession made to the chief in the presence of several witnesses, they stated that Bergsterman had been very drunk and they had taken her home, leaving her on the couch in the kitchen. At their suggestion, they said they had consented to illicit relations with her, and after committing the misdemeanor upon her person, they found she was dead.

According to their story, the girl threw a wrap around her and went out with them. When they discovered that she was dead, they carried her body into the house, and telling the father that his daughter was dead, laid the woman's body on the couch. The bruises on the woman's body they said, were made by Bergsterman who rolled the body off the couch and struck it.

It is the belief of the police that the crime committed by the young men is more serious than was stated by them in their confession. The theory held is that Berger and Meyer made a final attack on the woman, and that she died from exhaustion in struggling against them. This would also substantiate one of the two causes of death given by Drs. B. W. Edden and J. W. Gibson who performed the autopsy over the remains, and who stated that in their belief the woman had died from exhaustion following a struggle, or that she might have been smothered. A scratch on Meyer's face leads the authorities to believe the young men sought to force her and she struggled with them.

Warrants charging the young men with murder were issued and they were arraigned before Judge Charles F. Field in municipal court at a quarter to eleven. The warrants were read to them and the preliminary examinations for both set for ten o'clock next Wednesday morning. Both were released with them.

STRIKE A PROTEST ON MOTOR TRUCKS

Chicago Teamsters Strike in Protest Against Introduction of Large Auto Trucks.

(By Associated Press.)

Chicago, Oct. 3.—A strike which eventually will determine the attitude of the teamsters in this city toward the introduction of the large auto truck was begun today when thirty drivers of the Chicago Consolidated Bottling company refused to take out their teams. The company recently purchased six auto trucks of large capacity. The strikers, union officials declare, want the work of the auto trucks restricted to do only the work formerly performed by one team. Each truck is said to be capable of replacing two teams. Other large concerns here who employ many teams for hauling purpose became alarmed when they learned of the strike and the attitude of the teamsters' union proposed to take regarding the introduction of trucks.

This is said to be the first instance of a strike of teamsters because of the introduction of auto trucks, according to an official of the teamsters' union. There was no violence.

CONFESSES TO TWO DETROIT OUTRAGES

Man Held By Police Admits He Murdered 12 Year Old Girl Last Tuesday And Another Child Three Years Ago.

(By Associated Press.)

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 3.—If the story which George Brown Spengler told last night proves to be true, the mysterious crimes which have puzzled the Detroit police and detectives for nearly three years has been cleared up.

Spengler, a laborer, thirty years old, was arrested in connection with the murder of twelve year old Matilda Reis, whose mutilated body was found in an alley near the girl's home last Tuesday night. He confessed not only to having killed and mutilated this child but told the police also he had mistreated and murdered Helen Brown, eleven years old, whose body was found in a coal yard on Dec. 12, 1909.

Four other girls have been attacked in Detroit in the last thirteen months. One of them was permanently injured and the other left seriously hurt. Spengler admitted his guilt in two of the offenses. In each case the child was attacked as she lay sleeping in her parent's home.

For more than three years a succession of attacks on women and girls has puzzled local police officials. Women have been knocked down and dragged into dark alleys. With Spengler's confession, it was at first thought that the mysterious "prover" had been discovered, but it was their belief that Spengler was not the perpetrator of these outrages.

(By Associated Press.)

EXPECTED NO FAVORS

Declares That He Received No Promise of Any Kind in Return For Money And Acted Always For Government's Best Interests.

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, Oct. 3.—J. P. Morgan was the first important witness to testify today before the Clapp Committee investigating campaign funds.

His appearance was close upon that of George R. Sheldon whose sensational testimony of yesterday, when as the treasurer of the republican national committee for the present campaign, and the last swore that the late Cornelius N. Bliss had shown him records which bore evidence that Mr. Morgan's firm was one of the four which had contributed one hundred million dollars each to the republican war trust fund of 1904 and he was expected to develop more testimony along that line.

J. P. Morgan told the Clapp committee today he contributed $150,000 to the republican national campaign of 1904.

Mr. Morgan reached the committee room before the hour set for the hearing, accompanied by his son-in-law Herbert L. Satterlee. The financier tugged at his mustache as he took his seat and watched the members of the committee closely. After a few preliminary questions, chairman Clapp called Mr. Morgan's attention to a published article by Charles Edward Russell charging that President Roosevelt had demanded that Mr. Morgan raise $100,000 for his campaign and that Wayne MacVeagh had been present when Mr. Morgan talked with the White House over the telephone.

Mr. Morgan denied emphatically that he remembered any such incident. "In October 1904 I gave $100,000. In November I gave another all he knew of. He did not know who solicited the contributions, but believed Mr. Bliss and Mr. O'Dell got the money."

The witness declared he did not make any contribution to the present campaign of any candidate for president this year.

Aided Only Republicans.

Senator Payne, later questioned the witness, Mr. Morgan and in answer to a question said that he understood the $50,000 contribution went to the national committee. He understood, he said, that the national committee did not need funds, but that the state committee was badly in need of money. He said he had a great deal to do with Mr. Cortelyou during the campaign, but did not know whether he was present at the meeting when the $50,000 contribution was said he talked to many people during the campaign.

In reply to a question by Senator Pomerene, Mr. Morgan said he did not contribute to the campaign funds of any other political party in 1904. In answer to another question he said he talked to many people during the campaign, but did not remember having a conference with big financial interests at which was discussed the question of whom the interests would Charley Lavinge has a white hope destroyer named Art Nelson, either a Swede or a Dane, who comes well recommended from Wyeville, Wis. Nelson is a woodchopper with muscles like the girders in Brooklyn bridge, and from what Lavinge says, he should be able to put even Jas. Johnson to flight. Nelson stands 5 feet 11 inches and weighs 190 pounds in good shape. He has had quite a few fights in Wisconsin, his chief claim to fame being a knockout victory over Jumbo Wells. Lavinge is especially anxious to match Nelson with Ned Carpenter, Burlington's white hope.

Matt Wells is much cast down by the result of his recent match with Mehegan, the Australian lightweight, in which he was disqualified in the fourteenth round. Matt says he will challenge again for a $5,000 side bet after his bout with Freddie Welsh. Asked what he thought of Mehegan, he said: "The best man I have ever met. In saying this don't let me be misunderstood. He is not such a pretty fighter as Welsh, but he is stronger and has a heavier punch."

That President Somers of the Cleveland baseball club is confident that Joe Birmingham will be manager of the Naps next season is shown by the fact that the owner of the team has asked his present manager to pick out the training camp for 1913. Joe is inclined to select Pensacola, Florida.

Mrs. Mary Browne, of Pasadena, Cal., the national tennis champion, has added Mrs. Barger Wallace, of Newport, to the list of experts she has vanquished.

"The dope that shows either the Giants or Red Sox superior in one or another department will go for naught when they get onto the field to play the games," said Harry Wolverton, New York Yankee manager. "It will be a battle between managers as well as pitchers, and the team that gets the breaks will win the series."

Luther McCarthy and Al Kaufman will fight in San Francisco October 12.

Knock-out Brown, the terrible New Yorker, has started on his upward climb for the lightweight championship, and expects soon to take the crown away from Ad Wolgast, the Cadillac farmer. After a short campaign K. O. will issue a challenge to fight Wolgast for the title. So confident is he of his fist abilities that Brown will agree to fight Wolgast in California forty rounds or more.

Brown already has to his credit two defeats over Wolgast—the only had in the lightweight division who has earned that distinction. He showed in his recent bout with Sammy Ivott that he still possesses his K. O. punch.

Through the terms of a transfer recently completed, George H. Esser has purchased of William J. Hemming, the property and good will of the William Hemming's Sons brewing company at 106-110 North Franklin street, and has taken possession of the property. Mr. Hemming, it is understood, intends to retire from business on account of ill health. He has been connected with the brewing business in this city for about forty-one years. He will, however, remain at the plant for a few months until Mr. Esser learns the details of the business of the brewing company.

COXEY HAS NOVEL GOOD ROADS PLAN

"Gen." Jacob S. Coxey of Ohio, who created such excitement all over the country in 1894 by moving upon Washington with an army of unemployed, has a novel plan which he proposes to carry out next spring, and which may again make him a national figure. Coxey is a good roads enthusiast, and proposes to initiate an amendment to the Ohio constitution providing that the state shall issue $100,000,000 in bonds paying one-half of 1 per cent interest. The bonds to be issued in small denominations and accepted by the state in lieu of currency for taxes. Coxey believes the bonds will pass the same as money, and will use the proceeds of his proposed amendment on the grounds that Ohio should have good roads, and will get them without having to pay interest money on bonds used if it adopts his plan.

ASSIGN RESERVED SEATS AT BOSTON

Begin Delivery of Ticket Today For World's Series—Diamond Worked Into Perfect Condition.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Boston, Mass., Oct. 3.—Delivery of the world series reserved seat tickets for the games that are to be played in Boston began today. Notices were mailed to fortunate applicants last night to call at the club headquarters for the tickets that have been allotted them. Officials plan to have the distribution take place between nine to five p. m. every week day until the opening of the home games of the series.

The temporary seating arrangement has been completed and the field has been put in the best possible shape. The diamond has been graded, every pebble hand picked and then heavy rollers have been hauled back and forth over the infield and the base lines until the surface is as smooth as a table. Big canvas covers have been thrown over the infield not to be removed until Monday forenoon when the Red Sox go to the grounds for a workout before starting for New York in the afternoon. Ground keepers will get their men to work again as soon as the team leaves, to get the field in perfect condition for the second game which it is planned will take place, weather permitting, next Wednesday.

ANOTHER DEATH DUE TO EXPLOSION ON BOAT

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Newport, R. I., Oct. 3.—The fifth death, that of John Delaney first class fireman, due to the explosion of the steam chest on the torpedo boat destroyer Walker on Tuesday occurred today.

Fell Three Stories: George Uehler, while intoxicated last night, fell from the third floor porch of the Schmidley flats. He was found lying in the weeds at the rear and suffering great pain but an examination made by Dr. Munn disclosed no broken bones or internal injuries. Uehler does not stay in the Schmidley flats and wandered there to finish his spree as a pint bottle of whiskey was found on the fourth floor porch near his hat. He was taken to the police station but dismissed this morning on his promise to go to work as soon as possible.

OLEOMARGARINE MAY BE YELLOW.
An oleomargarine law, passed by the Minnesota legislature in 1911, prohibited the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine "of any shade or tint of yellow." One Hanson sold some oleomargarine in violation of this act, and for the crime was convicted. He appeals to the supreme court in State vs. Hanson, 136 Northwestern Reporter, 412, contending that the law is unconstitutional. The court holds that any law enacted to prevent fraud or deceit would be valid, but that this law does not make the intent to deceive or defraud essential to a conviction, and must therefore fail. Oleomargarine is made to resemble butter of a yellow color, not to deceive anybody, but because the public buys the substitute if it has the yellow shade, but refuses to buy if it has a light shade. The intent is not to deceive the public, but to make an article which will find a market. The sales of the light-shaded oleomargarine are but 10 per cent, as against 90 per cent for the darker shade. The direct and necessary result of the statute is to prohibit at least 90 per cent of the manufacture and sale of the product.

The yellow color of oleomargarine is the result of judicious selection and combination of fats, oils, and other necessary ingredients. No coloring matter is used. The result is a thoroughly healthful product that resembles yellow butter in appearance and texture, tastes like butter, and sells at a lower price. It is impossible to make it pure white or free from a slight yellow shade or tint. It being a wholesome article of food, the statute prohibiting those who want it from obtaining it cannot be upheld; no question of public health being involved. The court says: "The high price of butter is notorious. The poor man must often go without, or buy the inferior grades, while people of moderate means find good butter a luxury they can ill afford."

There is a large and growing demand for a butter substitute that will taste and look like butter, and that can be purchased at a less price. Apparently, judging from the fact that sales of the light-colored oleomargarine are but 10 per cent of the sales of the darker yellow, the people want their butter substitute to resemble butter in color as well as in texture and taste. The legislature says to them by this act: "You cannot have what you want; you must either buy butter made from cream, or you must buy oleomargarine that is white." Unless the prejudice of the people against the white color is removed, this is a command that they buy butter, and pay higher prices. It is impossible to appreciate why the public should not have a free choice, why butter should not be sold on its merits to those who want it, and why those who want oleomargarine of a yellow shade should not be permitted to have it." The order appealed from denying a new trial is reversed and a new trial granted.

This case cited by the "Docket," in its special interest cases for September, is important because it has to do with a law which has long been considered unjust by the great army of American butter consumers who feel that they can not afford to use it, when it becomes a luxury.

In the Minnesota case it will be noticed that the man, Hanson, sold oleomargarine in its natural color, but the court took the broad and common-sense view of the case that the legislature exceeded its authority when it said to the people, "You cannot have what you want."

The people who buy this whole-some substitute, do not feel able to buy butter. There is no reason why they should pay a premium. The Minnesota decision is just and should be far-reaching in results.

CHEAP TIMES ARE HARD TIMES.
The hardest times that the nation ever experienced, was when prices of all commodities were the cheapest. The years when the great corn crop of Iowa and Kansas was used for fuel, because at the market price of ten cents a bushel it could not be shipped.

Everything was cheap, during this era of depression, but nothing is cheap when there is no money with which to buy, and when enforced idleness is the rule, and not the exception.

The people have it in their power to reduce prices of food and merchandise if they so desire. All that is necessary is to take down the bars of protection and food the country with the free trade products of the old world.

Just a simple twist of the wrist, on the fourth of November, turns the trick, but don't be deluded as to results. When a nation cuts out the use of meat, to large extent, and reduces the consumption of flour one-half, prices are bound to come down, and when we wear out our old clothes for a couple of years, the factories stop running, but we have accomplished our purpose of reducing the cost of living.

History repeats itself on occasion and if the cheap prices of 1893-94 are desirable, they can be secured and reproduced as current history in 1913. The democratic party means well, but it has never made good, unless cheap prices and hard times are evidences of success.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY WILL WIN.
Because the republican party has given the country sixteen years of unexampled prosperity.

Because the democratic party would destroy manufactures, injure the farmers and drive workmen out of employment by enacting free trade legislation.

Because President Taft has been honest, efficient, fearless and patriotic in his administration.

Because Roosevelt has failed, even with his Democratic Aid Society, to wreck the republican party which honored him and which was good enough for him until he failed to get the nomination.

SOME REPUBLICAN FACTS.
Business never better.
Wages never higher.
Factories running full time.
Railroads crowded with traffic.
Labor in demand.
Bank deposits increasing.
Everybody busy and hopeful.
Why change when all's well?

SOME DEMOCRATIC FACTS.
Bread lines a mile long.
Soup houses everywhere.
Banks mostly busted.
Three million men idle.
Ten million children hungry.
Homes plastered with mortgages.
Nobody making any money.
Why have hard times again?

The thing which interests the taxpayers of the state, regardless of party is reckless extravagance and political graft, and if the state democratic ticket receives a heavy vote, it will not be surprising. The people of the state are tired of existing conditions, and ready to turn in any direction for relief.

Governor Johnson has failed to make much of an impression on his New York audience, during his tour of the state. The bull moose party is not popular in the Empire state and the contest is between the two old parties, with Taft's chances steadily improving.

A SON OF PROGRESS.
Air: Wearing of the Green
Oh, the Bull Moose and the Belle Moose they are a lively team; They'll raise a continental dust and make the eagle scream; And the party-colored Mooseling will join them in the run, With his dark side to the North Star, and his white side to the Sun.

Then down with the Bosses! and up with the Boss!
The Boss of all the bosses, The bossiest of bosses, The bi-bo-bu-bum Boss!

And the Bull Moose and the Belle Moose will roam the woolly West; And the Suffragette and Cowboy will give them of their best; And the hatchet and the lasso and the hat within the ring Will be Progressive heraldry the while we shout and sing:

Then down with the Bosses! and up with the Boss!
The Boss of all the bosses, The bossiest of bosses, The bi-bo-bu-bum Boss!

And the Boss of all the bosses is a truthful man and strong, For he tells us most sincerely that he

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON.

Hallowe'en.
There's one thing keeps the memory of our old home town green, And that's the celebration of the old-time Hallowe'en.
They talk about the pimplins and the witchies and all such, But as kids didn't figure on those features very much.
The girls could have their parties, but we never lingered nigh,
For on that special evening we had other fish to fry.
And when the population woke up early the next day They found their chattels mixed up in a most alarming way.

The bell rope in the meetin' house was cut off 'way up high.
The sexton couldn't climb that far to get it should he try.
A rod or two of fence was found on Deacon Perkins' burn.
The deacon when he saw it muttered something worse than "darn."
The shaky high school skelton was hanging good and tight
Up on the village flagpole, a forlorn and ghastly sight.

A sign announcing "Lager Beer, the Biggest Glass in Town," Was fastened to the harness shop of good old Elder Brown.
Another which said "Downing Done with Neatness and Dispatch," Was always found above the door of Dr. Renfrew Batch.
The blacksmith's sign would always hang with neat and jaunty grace Right out in front of Abner Jordan's watch repairin' place.

When all these hundred kids or more got busy raisin' hob
The constable, St. Pimmer, then and there threw up his job,
For when he thought he had a bunch of terrors cornered right,
Investigation showed him that there wasn't one in sight.
Our dads next day would argue in the olden shingle style,
And we would all be eatin' from the mantels for a while,
But then the fun was worth it and the sport was good and keen,
And nit a single one forgots the old-time Hallowe'en.

The Lady Made a Mistake.
So far as the lady's name is concerned we are sworn to secrecy. The thing had happened to her voice before, but the third time was once too often.

She stepped to the telephone to call her meat dealer and confidently pulled the dial.
"I would like two pounds of sirloin steak."
"We have no sirloin steak today."
"Then send some porterhouse."

never did a wrong,
And though all his toes are hars, he never tells a lie,<
But smilingly rebukes them, and gently puts it by.

Then down with the Bosses! and up with the Boss!
The Boss of all the bosses, The bossiest of bosses, The bi-bo-bu-bum Boss!

And the Boss of all the bosses—his hat is marked T. R.—
Will wave the red bandanna like a bloody falling star;
And the yellow flag will follow, trailed along from State to State,
Though both go down together, as they did in 'Eighty-eight.

So down with the bosses! and up with the Boss!
The Boss of all the bosses, The bossiest of bosses, The bi-bo-bu-bum - Bull Moose Boss!

WARSHIPS ARE ARRIVING FOR GREAT NAVAL REVIEW.
New York, Oct. 3.—The first of the American warships that will take part in the great naval review here the week after next has put in an appearance and another week, it is expected, will see all the ships, big and little, swinging at anchor in the Hudson. So numerous will the craft be that they will form an almost unbroken column extending from a point opposite Twenty-third street up the river as far as Yonkers. More than 700,000 tons of fighting ships and naval auxiliaries will be in the display, and of this grand total more than 450,000 tons will be superdreadnoughts, dreadnoughts, first-class battleships and armored cruisers.

"All we have is dog meat," was the reply.
"Well, for goodness sake, what kind of a meat market are you running, anyway?"
"We are not running a meat market, madam. This is the city dog pound. You evidently have the wrong number."
"Brute," she exclaimed, as she slammed up to the receiver and went out to scramble some eggs for supper.

The Codfish.
The codfish is a handsome bird. With plumage fair to see, He is a true and steadfast friend And makes a hit with me.
He lingers round the grocery store, His color is immense.
To meet him once is but to feel His presence decades hence.
He is a stranger in the land, His home is far away.
Amid the ocean's breaking waves And headlands' foamy spray, He's not only an ornament, But has a mission here.
He is a constant friend in need, When other grub is dear.
How often in the frosty eve, How often, O, how oft, Have we been to the corner store, And hush, a whisper soft, Requested to be shown our friend And clasp him to our breast, And force him to go home with us, And be our honored guest.

He's been at our home quite a lot At meal time, don't you know, He is the only bird for us, We've learned to love him so. He's bound to stay with us a spell, At least a month or so, Until the weather moderates And stops the cold and snow. We would enjoy a change of fare, But we can't make it quite, While we must pay out all our dough For naught but anthracite.

Columbus, O., Oct. 3.—The regular order of business at the annual session of the Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church was suspended today, while the delegates and the members of the local churches participated in a celebration of the centennial anniversary of the Ohio conference, which was formed in Chillicothe in 1812. Bishop Anderson of Cincinnati, Bishop Moore of Indianapolis and a number of other well known leaders of the church took part in the anniversary exercises.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. No cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness cured by our method. Send for circular, free.

Formal Autumn Opening:

Tomorrow and Saturday have been set aside as show days for the new fashions for Fall. The event is looked forward to with not a little eagerness on the part of Janesville fashionable women, for the style leaders are good enough to regard it as an authority. What's proper will be seen here in its fullness and in the best possible light. We take a good deal of pleasure in the preparing—for, after all, storekeeping isn't altogether sordid or mercenary. We forget business and we give up the store to sight seers and sociability; and the opening days, next the Christmas, form the most enjoyable time of the whole year. The broadest invitation is here extended to everyone to see the sights.

Here's a Stove That Saves 3 Tons of Coal Every Winter

When You Can Heat Your Home Luxuriously Warm All Winter With Three Tons of Coal, Why Will You Burn Six?

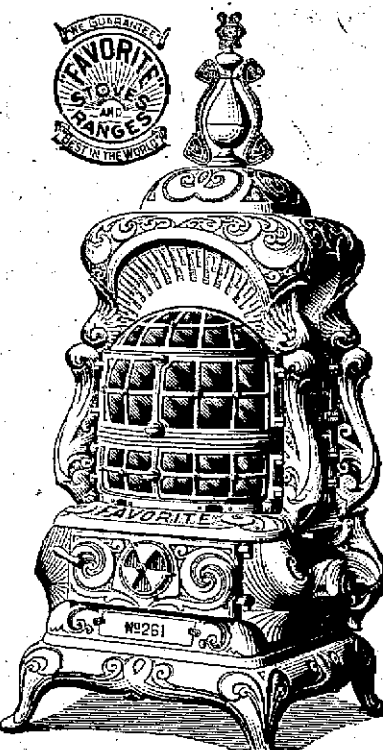

A Favorite Base Burner will heat every room in your house comfortably, and do it with half the fuel an ordinary base burner requires.

The common-sense construction of the Favorite is the reason why it is the best and most economical stove in existence. Most heating stoves let too much heat escape up the chimney. The Favorite doesn't let a bit escape—it throws it all into the room.

The illustration shows that no heat goes to waste with a Favorite. See how the heat travels in two streams down the back of the stove, at each corner, then forward across the bottom of the stove, underneath the ash pit. Then back across the bottom, and up the central flue to the stove pipe. All this great surface passed over radiates the heat into the room, and its area is more than doubled, because the back flues are set apart, and out from the stove, and the bottom flues are separated from the ash pit.

So, heat radiates from all sides of the back and bottom flues, as well as from the back and bottom of the stove. That's why everyone that buys a Favorite saves one-half on their fuel bills. Come and see us, and our Favorite will be your Favorite, too.

SCHOOL BOARD TOOK RADICAL ACTION AT SPECIAL SESSION

Decided to Close Jefferson School All Day Tomorrow to Properly Fumigate.

Owing to the presence of a new case of infantile paralysis appearing in the sixth grade of the Jefferson school, and feeling that the mere fumigation of the room in which the sick pupil attended on Monday last when taken sick, was not sufficient despite the opinion of the city health officer to the contrary. The city school board, at a special session today, ordered the school closed tomorrow for thorough fumigation.

While the case was not pronounced infantile paralysis until last evening the child was taken sick in school Monday afternoon. Last night the room she occupied at school was fumigated, also the room in which her brother was a pupil, and the toilet rooms. School was held as usual today in the school and the order of the board this afternoon was brought about after the matter had been thoroughly discussed and opinions of expert physicians obtained.

It is alleged that Dr. Cunningham, the city health officer, objected to making a thorough fumigation owing to the fact he was not paid for the extra work it would entail. An appeal was made to Mayor Paterson this afternoon and that official stated that the school would be fumigated according to instructions of the school board and that he thought such action necessary.

Miss Elizabeth Mount, the pupil sick, is confined to the home of her parents on Wisconsin street and is reported today as slightly improved, although her right side is said to be affected. Her brother, also a student in the school, is quarantined, although not ill, and every precaution is being taken to prevent any spread of the disease.

The subject of infantile paralysis is one over which there is still much dispute in medical circles as to whether it is contagious or not. Some hold it is; some that it is not. However, the Wisconsin state board of health offers the following suggestion for parents as preventative for the disease which it might be well to remember.

Take a spoonful of peroxide of hydrogen, place in a cup of water. Either use with an atomizer on nose and throat, or have it snuffed up into the nose and the throat gargled by the child. The hand or a cup may be used for snuffing.

This latest case has caused considerable uneasiness in the homes of students at the Jefferson school and the order for a thorough fumigation will be received with relief. The school board is most anxious to take all precautions possible.

INCOME TAX ROLLS OPENED TO PUBLIC

County Clerk Lee Receives Instructions From State Tax Commission Today.

County Clerk Howard W. Lee received orders from the state tax commission at Madison this morning instructing him to make public or to permit the inspection of the income tax assessment rolls and tax rolls, which have heretofore been kept secret, according to the law which provides that nothing shall be divulged in regard to the income tax assessment or proceedings until orders are issued by the tax commission.

According to the instructions received only the assessment rolls and the tax rolls shall be made public; all other proceedings including the action and testimony taken before the board of review is still debarred from public record. The letter sent out by the tax commission reads as follows:

Whereas, paragraph 4, of section 1087m-24 provides that the assessment and tax rolls and all proceedings had and evidence taken before the county board of review shall be open to public inspection under such conditions as the tax commission may direct.

Now, therefore, it is hereby ordered and directed that all assessment rolls which have been completed, by the assessor, and the board of review, and filed in your office, and all tax rolls as soon as completed shall be treated as public records open to the inspection of all persons having occasion to consult the same to the same extent and in the same restrictions as other public records in your custody.

You are further instructed and directed not to make public or permit the examination of any return, exhibit, writing, or proceeding in your possession or custody relating to the return or assessment of income tax except the assessment and tax rolls hereinafter referred to.

FUNERAL OF MATILDA BERGSTERMAN HELD

Body of Murdered Woman Interred in Mount Olivet Cemetery This Morning Following Service.

While the state and its agents this morning were directing all their energies toward the apprehension of her murderers the church performed the last rites over the body of their victim, Matilda Bergsterman, found cold and lifeless Tuesday morning in the wretched hotel that was her only home. The body was removed from the undertaking rooms of Nelson Brothers, where it had reposed since removal from the scene of the crime and taken to St. Mary's church, where funeral services were held at 9:15 o'clock.

The Rev. Father Goebel delivered a brief sermon and Miss Lillie Bourg-meyer sang "Lead Kindly Light." Prof. W. T. Thiele played the organ for the musical part of the services. Friends of the unfortunate woman who had often extended her kindness and charity in her lifetime did not forget her in death and brought flowers to deck her casket. Her father on whom has rested the shadow of the crime was not at the funeral.

Many acquaintances of the deceased were present. Those who acted as pall bearers were O'Brien, William Murray, E. J. Schmiedley and James Sheridan.

SEED CORN REQUIRES SPECIAL ATTENTION

Government Expert Tells of Value to Nation and Urges Greater Care in Choice of Seed.

Some idea regarding the economic importance of corn may be had by a realization that in the United States it exceeds in acreage, yield and value wheat, oats, barley, flax, rye, buckwheat and potatoes combined.

An increased value of one cent per bushel would mean an additional income to the farmers of the United States of twenty-five million dollars, while an increased production of but one bushel per acre at fifty cents per bushel would add fifty million dollars annually to the national wealth.

In addition to its magnitude, the crop is important because of the wide range of industries in which some portion of the corn plant plays a more or less important part. In fact, it may almost be said that there is no industry into which some product or by-product of the corn plant does not enter. Therefore, any conditions which effect the production of this king of crops are of interest to every citizen of the United States.

Each spring many farmers discover when it is too late—that their seed corn either fails to germinate or produces but a weak growth. They must either pay high prices for viable seed, which may or may not be acclimated and adapted to their conditions, or by means of laborious tests they may pick out such of their seed as will at least "come up."

The corn crop of 1912 is now practically made and the time for selecting seed for 1913 has arrived in the southern sections and will reach even the latest sections of the United States sometime in October. Unless sufficient seed corn is selected at the right time in the right way, there will be the same deplorable situation next spring—again when it is too late—as there has been at each previous planting time.

With very few exceptions the best possible seed may be selected on the farm on which it is to be planted, and by carrying out the following instructions, issued by the Office of Corn Investigations, of the United States Department of Agriculture, each farmer may provide himself with an abundance of seed of the highest productivity, for planting in 1913.

The process of seed selection is of too great importance to be conducted incidentally while husking, and in many localities if selection is delayed until husking time, the vitality of the seed will have already been injured by an early freeze. As soon, therefore, as the crop ripens, go through the field with bags and husk the ears from those stalks which have produced best without having had any special advantage, such as space, moisture or fertility. Late maturing plants with ears are heavy because of an excessive amount of sap should be ignored.

In the Central and Southern states, other things being equal, short, thick stalks are preferable. These permit of thicker planting, are not so easily blown down, and are usually more productive than slender ones. The tendency to sucker is hereditary. Other things being equal seed should be taken from stalks having no suckers.

The same day that the seed corn is gathered, the husked ears should be put in a dry place where there is good circulation of air, and placed in such a manner that the ears do not touch each other. If no previous arrangement for caring for the seed have been made the ears may be suspended with binder twine, tying them about two inches apart. The twine will support fifteen or twenty ears.

If this method cannot conveniently be followed, tables may be improvised by placing boards across boxes, or barrels. These boards should be dry and not too wide, and should be spaced one or one and a half inches apart. The seed ears can be put on these tables, using care to have them spread out to insure a good circulation of air among them. It will be advisable to move the ears a couple of times at intervals of about two days, when first put on the tables.

Whichever method is used, the seed should be placed in a shed or building, having a good circulation of air, and where it will be protected from rain and excessive cold, as well as from rats and mice.

Do not store the seed in a cellar. The driest cellars are too damp and do not afford a free circulation of air. Do not store the seed in a room in which there will be vapor to condense on it and prevent its drying, as in a barn over stock, or in an out-house used for washing, etc.

If seed corn is stored properly it should be thoroughly dry in from three weeks in the South to eight weeks in the North, and it kept dry it will be safe from injury by insects and vermin. In the North the ears may be left where they were dried. In regions where seed corn is damaged by weevils or grain moths, it should be packed in boxes and treated as described in Farmers' Bulletin 115, entitled "Seed Corn."

By the proper selection and care of seed corn, as outlined above, the yield may be greatly increased with but a slight additional expense. Increases of 18 bushels per acre, due to properly preserving the seed, have been obtained.

In every phase of present day agriculture, the tendency is toward efficiency. The days of large profits under profligate methods have passed, and there is no cheaper or easier way of increasing the profits from the farm than by properly selecting and caring for your seed corn.

INTERESTING STORY IS TOLD OF WHEAT

Supt. H. C. Buell Reads Account of Greatest of All Grains To High School Students.

At the opening exercises at the High school during the present week Supt. H. C. Buell has read from a recently published article by Edwin L. Barker on the subject of wheat production and the making and distributing of bread. The account was very interesting and instructive and brought out many points which are unfamiliar to the average student. In its main outlines the "story of wheat" is told as follows:

The American people are now in a position where they can see bread almost anywhere. It was only fifty years ago when wheat was in a raw state, and especially hard to get. Fifty centuries would trace us back to the time when the discovery of wheat was made. It was at first found in a weed-form, as a wild grass or lily. From this time to the present time, generations have died, without even seeing this grass, or knowing what it was.

At one time women worked the grain with their hands in an effort to produce a rough kind of bread. Today, bread is so cheap, that a modern hotel forgets to charge for it. This has been a long-learned advance toward civilization and happiness which the American people are proud of.

It has been thought that cotton was king of all products, but the truth of this is seen when we speak of bread. Back in the civil war times, the cotton girded the production in the south, and the reaper in the north. At no time has cotton defeated the production of wheat. It can not be said that clothes make the man, but we all must concede that food makes the man. The people today not only live to eat, but they eat to live, and wheat-bread is what keeps this nation thriving. Were it not for wheat, the United States would be classed with the shiftless country of China, and with the production of 1910 showing 700 million bushels of wheat from our nation's field, a ruined nation does not seem liable.

Mr. James Hill says, that land without population is a wilderness; that population without land is a mob, and also that population without bread is famine and death. This statement covers all which might be said concerning the importance of this product.

When Columbus discovered this country, he "inherited" millions of acres of land, rich and suitable for production. Then, McCormick found the Harvester of today. These were the two things necessary for the producing of wheat, and when they met, progress was off. It is always considered that a commodity is hard to sell than it is to make or obtain. This does not apply to bread, for it is always in demand, more so than any other article, and is ready for use at any time.

This interesting topic was very instructive to the High school students and they listened to it with interest.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. HAYLOCK

Remains of Edgerton Woman Who Died At Wales Sanitarium Were Laid At Rest Yesterday.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Edgerton, Oct. 3.—The funeral of the late Mrs. Mattie Edgerton Haylock who died at the state sanitarium at Wales, Wis., was held yesterday afternoon at the M. E. church, conducted by Rev. T. W. Worth, and was largely attended. Music was furnished by the Milton College Male Quartet.

The deceased was born in the town of Porter on April 9, 1856. On January 19, 1887, she was united in marriage to William Haylock. Her life has been spent in Edgerton and vicinity and she was well known to the people of this community. For the past year her health has rapidly declined. She leaves a mother, two brothers, two sisters and a large circle of other relatives to mourn her loss.

She was a member of the Methodist church and took a deep interest in the church and its work and was very conscientious in the use of her time, her talents and her means. A large part of her income was always used for Christian charitable purposes. In addition to her liberal support of the church, she was a regular contributor to the support of the Council Bluffs Christian home. She lived for the good of what she could do and always sought to do her full duty in any enterprise in which she was interested. In her relations with others she was always charitable in her judgment, would rather think well of a person than ill. Her heart always went out to the unfortunate and the sinner and she desired to be helpful. She was of a kindly and affectionate nature and as a true Christian loved God and humanity. She will be greatly missed by her church and a large circle of relatives and friends. "God giveveth his beloved sleep."

Interment was made in Fasset cemetery. The pall bearers were: E. C. White, C. E. Babcock, J. L. Holton, George Dickinson, M. J. Schmidt and Westman Dickinson.

HEADQUARTERS ARE OPENED IN OSHKOSH

William M. Bray Will Conduct Sprited Campaign in State for Taft's Election.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

William M. Bray of Oshkosh, appointed manager of the Taft campaign in Wisconsin by the republican national committee at a meeting in Chicago, Monday, will open headquarters in Oshkosh today, and will begin an active campaign at once. Branch headquarters will be established in Milwaukee county, and probably in Madison, early next week, but everything pertaining to the campaign will be conducted from Oshkosh.

Mr. Bray will be assisted by George P. Harbrecht of Grand Rapids, H. M. Morgan of Madison, and by supporters of the president in every county. Taft clubs will be organized throughout the state and congressional district organizations formed.

Detailed Plans Not Ready.

Mr. Bray, who was in Milwaukee yesterday, when asked as to his plans, said:

"This appointment has come so suddenly that I have not had time to decide on detailed plans.

"Ordinarily the republican national committee for Wisconsin co-operating with the republican state central committee, would be expected to take charge of the presidential, as well as of the state campaign, but so far nothing has been done in this state to further President Taft's candidacy, and the time is so short that immediate action is necessary.

Depend on Local Orators.

"Generally speaking, the campaign will be one of advertisement, speech-making and distribution of campaign literature. I shall endeavor to secure from the national committee the best speakers available, but will probably have to depend upon local orators to do most of the work.

"President Taft's friends may rest assured that, to the extent of my ability, I will do my utmost to assure victory for him in Wisconsin, but friends should also fully realize that nothing can be accomplished without their earnest and unfailing support. I realize the responsibility I undertake in accepting this appointment from the national committee, but I ask all loyal republicans to assist me and I shall expect support from all who believe as I do that the re-election of President Taft is of most vital importance, not only to our own state but to the nation as well.

Assume Entire Responsibility.

"While accepting the responsibility of this appointment, I want it known that I also assume the entire responsibility for the manner in which this campaign is conducted. Whatever criticism may be made regarding the management of the Taft campaign in Wisconsin, no one will ever have any reason whatever to make any charge that this campaign has not been clean and honestly conducted.

"The republican national committee does not wish to interfere in our state politics, and I shall therefore confine my efforts strictly to the election of the national ticket."

Eugene Hilt, driver of a delivery wagon for the Carle grocery in the Fifth ward, suffered a dislocated wrist and bad bruises on his face yesterday when the horse ran away and tipped him out. The animal took fright at the corner of Ravine and Chatham streets, because annoyed by a dog, and started down Palm street. In front of the Grant school the seat became unfastened and Hilt was tipped out. There he was picked up and carried to the residence of Mrs. Hanson, 234 North Terrace street, where Dr. E. F. Woods was called to attend him. Later Hilt was taken to his home at 520 North Chatham street. The horse ran several blocks beyond the Grant school before stopping.

DINNER STORIES

Dinner stories... The barber shop was well patronized when in walked a shabby stranger. "Good morning, sir!" called the barber doubtfully. "Good morning," replied the stranger. "My good man, will you shave one side of my face for a nickel?" The barber winked at his waiting customers. "Certainly," he replied. "Take a seat, please."

Presently it was the shabby stranger's turn to occupy the seat of honor. "Now, which side shall I shave?" asked the barber, as he waved the latter brush in the air. "The outside!" replied the shabby stranger meekly. "I don't believe that women will make good mothers if they are allowed to vote," was the ever old and ever new argument advanced at a meeting where Mrs. Gudden was speaking. "That reminds me of the story of the little girl and her cat," replied Mrs. Gudden. "One day she was earnestly scolding her kitten because she did not keep herself clean. 'What kind of a mother will you ever make?' she remonstrated, and giving the kitten a good shake, she concluded. 'Why, you won't even make a good father!'"

"Yesterday," complained the Sunday school superintendent, "you boys sat through a twelve-inning game and you showed no signs of uneasiness. Yet here you cannot listen to me for thirty minutes without becoming restless. I can't understand why the ball game receives more serious attention."

"Because," came in a stage whisper from a seat of husky boys, "they change pitchers occasionally."

The sessions of the senate committee investigating campaign expenditures reveal the fact that Senator Clapp, an active Roosevelt supporter, and Senator Oliver, just as ardent for Taft, are inclined to avoid if possible disclosures which will injure their presidential candidates.

Republicans and Democrats are already making capital of the fact revealed by the testimony of C. C. Tegethoff, W. H. Harrison's secretary, that Roosevelt dined with Harrison on several occasions. The testimony of Ormsby McHarg next week will be important, as it will throw a flood of light on the methods used and money spent by the Roosevelt managers in the campaign to secure Roosevelt delegates for the Chicago convention last June.

Madam! If You Don't Feel Right Take Delicious "Syrup Of Figs."

WASTE, CLOGGED BOWELS, TORPID LIVER AND DECAYING FOOD IN STOMACH CAUSE THE SICK HEADACHE, GAS, BACKACHE, SALLOWNESS, BILIOUSNESS AND INDIGESTION.

All women get bilious, headachy and constipated—simply because they don't exercise enough. They don't eat coarse food, or enough fruit and green vegetables. Those are nature's ways of keeping the liver and thirty feet of bowels active; but very few women employ them. The next best way is delicious, Fruity Syrup of Figs.

Nearly all ills of women can be overcome with Syrup of Figs alone. There is no need to have sick headache, backache, dizziness, stomach sour and full of gases, bilious spells, sallowness, coated tongue, bad breath, bad complexion, nervousness and depression. The surest and safest remedy is one or two teaspoonfuls of delicious Syrup of Figs. Try this tonight—you'll feel splendid in the morning when the sour bile, clogged up waste and poisonous matter have been gently but thoroughly moved on and out of your system, without nausea, griping or weakness. Your head will be clear, complexion rosy, breath sweet, stomach regulated; no more constipation, gases, pains and aches. It is simply a matter of keeping your stomach, liver and bowels clean and regular. Then you will always be well—always look and feel your best.

But get the genuine—the old reliable. Ask your druggist for Syrup of Figs and Blixir of Senna. Refuse, with contempt, the so-called Fig Syrups sometimes substituted to fool name California Fig Syrup Company; you. The true, genuine, bears the look for this on the label! Adv.

MORGAN TESTIFIES AS TO FUNDS GIVEN REPUBLICAN PARTY

support for president.

Expected No Favors.

Mr. Morgan interrupted the examination to make this statement: "I want it distinctly understood," said Mr. Morgan emphatically, "that J. P. Morgan & Company never made a single subscription to any election with any promise or expectation of any return in any shape or manner and we ever made a subscription unless we thought it for the best interest of the government, and the people. We never had a communication or application from any candidate. The only interest we had was for the welfare of the public. We never asked any commitment, expected any returns and we never got any."

"During this campaign was there any intention on your part to support the democratic candidate?" asked Senator Pomerene.

"I never heard of it if there was," replied Mr. Morgan smiling. "If we had thought the election of a democrat was for the best interests of the country, we would have contributed to his campaign."

Knew of no Conference.

Mr. Morgan responding to another question about a "conference" said he thought he would "have been apt to know if there had been a small conference of large financiers," looking to the election of Col. Roosevelt but he had no knowledge of such. Mr. Morgan said he had never been in Mr. Harriman's office and very seldom talked with him during the 1904 campaign about the political situation.

Under questions by Senator Pomerene, Mr. Morgan repeated he had been given to understand that the "Harriman" $240,000 fund was being raised for the state committee, but was being given to the national committee.

"You understand that though intended for the state committee the contribution would aid the national committee did you not?"

Mr. Morgan declared that $30,000 was all that he gave to the 1908 campaign.

Mr. Morgan was excused for the present and told he was entitled to expense money for coming to Washington.

Duell on Stand.

Charles H. Duell, who in 1904 was assistant treasurer of the republican national committee, followed Mr. Morgan on the stand. He said he knew of no contribution by John D. Archbald under that name. He had known there had been "several contributions of $100,000 each and that the insurance companies each had given $50,000."

"Did you know any members of the Standard Oil Company besides Mr. Archbald, who contributed to the 1904 campaign?" asked Chairman Clapp.

"I think H. H. Rogers contributed, but I do not know the amount."

Mr. Duell said treasurer Bliss told him that in 1896 all the banks and most of the trust companies in New York city had contributed to the republican national campaign fund. In 1904 fewer of them contributed and in 1904 still fewer. Judge Duell said the Harriman contribution was raised for the state committee after he and Mr. Bliss had decided that the national committee needed no further funds. The committee recessed until ten o'clock tomorrow when Col. Roosevelt will be heard.

Why the Millennium Didn't Come.

THE millennium was sitting on the edge of a fluffy cloud. "I think," it said as it looked downward, "it would be a good thing for me to visit the earth. Seems to me that old planet needs me pretty badly."

It peered through the blue and saw straight into Mrs. Hawkins' home. "Be nice to that mean Mrs. Snodgrass?" she was saying to her husband. "What do you take me for? She is one of those nasty, catty women who are always saying horrid things in a soft, purring way. Indeed, I'm not going to invite her. If we'd all just cut her it would do her a lot of good."

"Maybe if you were all kind to her and didn't take any notice of what she said," suggested her husband mildly, "she'd get over being so catty, as you call it."

"Not a bit of it. She'd think we wanted to curry favor, and she'd be worse than ever. The men take her side because she's pretty."

Mr. Hawkins subsided. And the millennium sighed a bit and looked in another direction.

This time its gaze went straight into a business office.

A gray-haired man with a stubby mustache was sitting looking at a typewritten letter and drumming with his fingers on the table.

"So Harmon's going to make a smashing big cut in his dry goods, is he, right in the beginning of the season? They say he's pretty close to the wall, and he's got to have money. Well, I know where I can get some goods that'll make his sale look like a collapsed toy balloon along side a dirigible. To be sure, I don't need the money. I'm getting on all right. But business is business. A fellow can't afford to be sentimental."

He reached for the phone. "Hello, Bonwit, Cluett & Co.? Mr. Bonwit, please. Hello, Mr. Bonwit. This is Hawkins. I'll accept that offer you made me on those goods. Yes, I'll send a letter. Not at all. Good-bye."

The millennium sighed once more and looked in another direction. This time it saw into the wealthy home of Mrs. Dallas. Mrs. Dallas, in an exquisite negligee all fine handwork and rare lace, was showing her bosom friend, Mrs. Ruppald, a necklace Mr. Dallas had given her on her birthday, the day before.

"He's been a real, mind you, collecting the pearls. Really the cost of it is fabulous. I told him he shouldn't be so extravagant. But isn't it superb?"

"It's magnificent," exclaimed the other. "I believe it's the finest in the country."

"That's what the jeweler told Mr. Dallas. What is it, Marie?" she said impatiently, turning to the maid who had entered.

The maid gave her a card. "The Rev. James Hunsicker," she read. "What a nuisance. He's pestering the life out of me to give something to a home for convalescents or incurables or something. Tell him I'm engaged. Really," she said, turning to her friend. "I would beggar myself if I gave to all the people who ask."

"I know," replied her friend. "It's perfectly awful. They just seem to think you're made of money."

Again the millennium sighed. "I'm a pretty good sort," it said, "and I'd make things pretty nice down there. But I don't believe I'm wanted." Then it pushed a button and the cloud moved on.

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a girl or 17 and lately became acquainted with a young man. He asked to call at my home and I allowed him. We have been going out a few times, but lately my mother does not seem to like him. Every time he comes she gives him a cold reception, which makes him feel embarrassed. The other day mother told me she does not want me to go with him. He is very nice and I would not care to give him a cold reception, which do.

If you were older, my dear, and possessed of good judgment, I should tell you to follow your heart. But a girl of 17 is not as wise as her mother, and mother undoubtedly sees something of considerable disadvantage in this young man or she would not oppose your friendship with him. So be guided by your mother until you know a little more about the world and the kind of men that live in it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a girl of 13. I have been visiting a certain theater for quite a while and have taken a liking to one of the ushers. We have spoken to each other many times, though we have not had a proper introduction. When by chance we meet on the street he always recognizes me. I do not know his name and he does not know mine.

I am giving a party and would like to invite him. I know the owner of the theater. Do you think it would be proper for me to get the usher's name and address from the owner and send him an "invite"? I would like to get better acquainted with him.

HOPEFUL.

Ask the theater manager what he knows of this young man. If the report is good, tell him you would like to meet the usher. He can arrange an introduction. Then send the invitation to the young man. You can not invite him otherwise without losing his respect.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am 27 years old and a divorced man. Last April I met a young lady and saw her three nights a week till three weeks ago, when we had a quarrel. I wrote her a letter and three cards and she didn't answer them, but she called me up and I met her and she said she waited a week and didn't hear from me and met another fellow and is going out with him now.

She always said she liked me and I asked her how she would like to keep a flat for us both. She said, "All right." But now she says she is engaged to this other young man. How can I win her back? ANTHONY.

The young lady couldn't have liked you very well or she would not have become engaged to another young man in such a hurry. Better give her up and look for somebody more certain of her own mind.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am troubled with hoarseness in my throat, but have no cold or cough. Please tell me some home remedy. Reader, Take a swallow of lemon juice, or beat up the white of an egg and swallow it slowly.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—Is a contract

signed on Sunday by my father good for business college? CONSTANT READER.

A CHAPTER ON ROLLS.

There is no bread which seems quite so nice or is so well liked for any and all occasions as good rolls. There are so many varieties that one may change the form and flavor and have something new each day, if desired.

Finger Rolls.—Mix a cup of scalded milk with a tablespoonful of butter and one of sugar, add salt and half a yeast cake dissolved in half a cup of warm water, then add flour enough to knead, and knead fifteen minutes or until it is springy and light to the touch; set to rise four hours in a warm place. When light, roll in balls, then into cylinders on a floured board. Arrange in a shallow pan and let rise until double in size, and bake until a golden brown. Glaze with beaten egg and a sprinkling of sugar.

Kentucky Rolls.—Mix together a half yeast cake dissolved in a half cup of warm water, four cups of flour, a teaspoonful of salt, half a cup of lard, a tablespoonful of sugar and enough milk and water to make a batter. Let it rise in a warm place, add flour enough to knead, then set to rise again. When light, knead, shape and set to rise again, then when light bake in a hot oven.

Bath Buns.—Dissolve a yeast cake in two cups of warm water; add enough flour to make a moderately stiff sponge and let rise about two hours. Cream together one and a half cupsful each of butter and sugar, add a cupful of luke warm water, a pinch of salt and two eggs well beaten. Mix with the sponge, let rise, then knead, shape into buns, arrange them close in a baking pan and let rise until very light. Bake in a moderate oven.

Swedish Rolls.—Use any plain roll mixture, and when shaping for the last rising, roll the dough very thin and spread with butter, sprinkle with sugar, cinnamon and currants; roll up and cut in half-inch slices; let rise until double in bulk, then bake in a moderate oven.

Nellie Maxwell.

To Can Wild Plums.

Wash them good, then put on the stove to boil with water just enough to cover them. When they have boiled fifteen or twenty minutes, add one level teaspoon of soda in every gallon of fruit. Do not add sugar, because it hardens them. Can in sterilized jars. When ready to use, they may be pitted and sweetened to taste.

After It.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

CONDITIONS OF LONGEVITY.

In his good work on "The Prolongation of Life," Prof. Metchnikoff, director of the Pasteur Institute, has aimed to show that diet is the essential condition for longevity—and therefore for efficiency—particularly buttermilk, all the noted cases mentioned by him having lived practically on bread and milk.

He overlooked the importance of the mental condition, the avoidance of worry. Some hold that optimism depends upon the physical condition; others insist that it is unnecessary to pay any attention to diet, exercise, and other physical conditions, providing the mental attitude is right; that all disease is in the mind, and that it can be cured by right thinking. Both positions are extreme. The body constantly influences the mind, and the mind the body. In fact, the relations are inseparable, dual-unitary.

Mrs. Fannie Friedman, who recently died in New York at the age of 112, placed first among the rule of good living, "Don't worry." Many who have reached an advanced age have been addicted to the use of alcohol, but have been distinguished by a care-free spirit. Good nutrition is dependent as much upon good mental condition as upon good food. Fear stops the secretions upon which digestion depends, while "contentment therewith" insures good digestion.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

IF MEN DID WOMEN'S WORK.

DON'T you think it would be a grand thing, if for a short space of time—a month perhaps—every housewife in the land could leave her kitchen and her household and let the men folks do her work? If such a thing were possible, I think a great many good results would be brought to pass.

One would be that some men would cease to wonder what their wives did with their time.

Another would be that some men would realize that the money they have thought themselves generous in giving their wives was entirely inadequate pay for the work they have been doing.

And another result—and this is the point which I want to bring out today especially—would be that much better equipments for housework would be immediately installed in the homes. For no man would put up for a month with the makeshifts and make-works which the average woman endures.

One morning I chanced to be in the kitchen of a woman who does all the work for her family of eight. She was making the toast which is invariably part of their breakfast. In turning the toaster she dropped two pieces of bread and burned her hand getting them back. "I'm always doing that," she exclaimed. "It's that horrid old toaster. It's been broken for months and I ought to get a new one." And a new toaster would probably have cost about a quarter.

I remember in our own kitchen an obstinate egg beater which struggled frantically against performing its duty. At a conservative reckoning it must have taken twice as long to beat an egg with that instrument of nerve torture as it should have. Yet we made shift with that miserable thing for at least a year. And you can get a good egg beater for twenty cents!

The other day I assisted with the dish washing in a summer cottage. There was no scourer. There had not been any all summer. That meant that it had taken about three times as long to wash the pots and kettles every day. Again and again I have heard the woman complain that she didn't get as much time to be out of doors as she had hoped. And a scourer would cost ten cents!

Housework is hard work at best; its infinite demands eat up an astonishing amount of time. All too many women have sad reason to quote—

"Men's work is from sun to sun,
But woman's work is never done."

Surely then every housewife ought to have the best possible equipment. Sometimes their failure to do so is due to economy; sometimes it's just carelessness. If it's economy, it's false economy; if it's carelessness, it's very foolish and a waste of energy.

Every woman owes it to herself and her family to have as much time for rest and recreation as possible. The intelligent, modern woman is coming to realize this and to know that perfect equipment will help her. A professor's wife who decided to enlarge her husband's income by doing her own work, at once perfected her regulation equipment and added to it a fireless cooker, a dish washer and a vacuum cleaner.

Men insist that they cannot do their work satisfactorily unless they have the best possible equipment.

Why shouldn't women make the same demands?

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

by Henrietta
D. Graue

It is no longer economical to make vinegar at home, though it is an article of great value and easily made. However, it is surprising that there are so few vinegars of various flavors upon our tables.

The flavoring of herb vinegars is a simple process; a few herbs are put in a bottle, some well flavored vinegar poured over them and the whole heated in a bain-marie; this is all that is necessary and a good store of spice and herb vinegar is of great value, not alone in salads, but in sauce making and cooking in general.

A few years ago vinegar was made entirely from apple cider; how many methods are resorted to, to manufacture it in the cheapest manner. It is even produced by mixing molasses and water and pouring the cover savings of red oak wood and then letting them ferment. Sulphuric acid diluted with water; and muriatic acid in a compound containing sour wine and niter was a common commercial vinegar until the pure food law requirements demanded that all vinegar should contain at least 5 per cent of acetic acid.

A standard and reliable article is made from malt, and cider vinegar may be had from careful grocers everywhere. In Canada a delightful vinegar is made from maple sugar but this is little known in this part of the country.

So injurious is impure, acid vinegar that many persons use the juice of lemons to impart sharpness to their food; as it has not undecayed fermentation it naturally commands itself to those who are interested in the hygiene of their family.

The Heinz recipe for best table vinegar is said to be the following: Place three gallons best cider vinegar in a cask and add three pounds of strained honey. Cover and let stand eight weeks when it should be strained into bottles and corked. This is said to be so strong that it requires diluting one half.

Renowned tarragon vinegar is made with fresh or dried tarragon leaves; it gives a zest to salads that is appreciated by the French but not by those good liverers along. Every salad lover praises it and pays seventy-five cents for a half pint bottle if they have not learned to make it themselves.

Pick the leaves from the stalk and wash well; put a cup of them into a pint bottle, and cover with warm vinegar and place where it will remain warm a few hours. Then cork and let stand for two weeks, strain into cruet as needed.

It is excellent on fish as well as in salads. A small plant of tarragon may be grown in even a small city yard and the cheapest meat dish is improved by adding a few of the leaves as you would use parsley.

Horseradish Vinegar—Mix a cup of grated horseradish with one teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of sugar; cover with a pint of hot vinegar and take care of the children, they take them along.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Woolley

"Now I never took my children visiting, because I didn't want them to be a bother to other people, though I taught them from the beginning to respect other people's belongings. It's different now. Children aren't taught to respect anything, including their parents."

"I don't like to see children punished, but I know some that are just aching for a good, old-fashioned spanking. I have seen children visiting whose mothers allowed them to do anything they pleased—damage the furniture, break bric-a-brac, and so on, without even noticing. One little boy deliberately broke a valuable vase belonging to a friend of mine. His mother simply said 'Too bad,' without any idea of offering to replace the vase."

Man the Only Reasoning Animal.

Men act according to knowledge and reasoning ability. Other animals act by instinct born with them, and upon which they never improve. Birds build the same kind of nests right along. Men are always using their ability to improve their houses. Instinct is the name for the inferior kind of knowledge the lower orders of creation naturally possess. In some cases, as with dogs, horses, etc., this can be increased by careful training, or even by imitation.

ADJOURNED CASE TO SATURDAY MORNING

Coroner's Jury Took Adjournment After Hearing Testimony Yesterday Afternoon.

Adjournment in the hearing of testimony before the coroner's jury of six investigating the death of Matilda Bergsterman was taken yesterday afternoon at four o'clock after the testimony of all the witnesses summoned had been heard. This action was taken at the request of District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie, who asked that a couple of days further time to continue his investigations be given him to see if other witnesses could be secured who might tell something that would throw additional light on the case of the woman's death.

In the testimony yesterday afternoon, Chief of Police Appleby was called to tell of his investigation of the woman's death, and the arrest of Bergsterman at the home. Miles Fanning, bartender at a saloon on River street, testified that Bergsterman had been in the place from about seven o'clock until closing time on Monday evening, and that the man had been slightly intoxicated when he entered the saloon. He said Bergsterman was not badly intoxicated when he left at eleven o'clock, having slept part of the evening. Eugene Roessling of the firm of Roessling Bros. told that Bergsterman had come to the rear door of his home over the store about half past twelve or one o'clock Tuesday morning, but by the time Mr. Roessling had got to the door, Bergsterman was going down the back steps. Going to the front part of his house, Mr. Roessling had recognized the man as he passed under the electric light, but did not call him back, as he thought Bergsterman was drunk. H. Nelson, the undertaker, who took charge of the body, testified as to the condition of the clothing worn by Miss Bergsterman.

Ben Bergsterman brother of the victim of Monday night's tragedy, was the one who saw her last on that night. He testified that as he was standing in front of a restaurant on Milwaukee street, she had passed him, apparently on her way home. She spoke to him as she passed, he said, but he had not talked to her. Bergsterman said he had not lived with his father and sister for about two years, leaving them when the home was broken up and they were preparing to move from South Third street.

UPPER PENINSULA TEACHERS MEET IN IRON MOUNTAIN

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Iron Mountain, Mich., Oct. 3.—Iron Mountain is entertaining for two days a small army of public school teachers in attendance at the annual convention of the Upper Peninsula Educational Association. President W. D. Hill, of Crystal Falls, presided at the first of the general sessions today. Among the prominent speakers were Professor Earl Barnes of Philadelphia and Dr. S. D. Fess, president of Antioch College.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

In the Janesville Gazette of Sept. 28th, I noticed an anti-suffrage editorial so unusually bad that I venture to review. Has it occurred to you that the adult population of California will be fairly represented for the first time at a presidential election, this fall? If the guess is correct and the state vote is doubled, what becomes of the next proposition, namely, that a much larger number of women than men are indifferent to political matters and densely ignorant concerning them? So long as women have no voice in the government the position of the Janesville women who refused to endorse at Mrs. Foster's invitation was both natural and dignified. You state broadly that there is no sentiment in business, and less in politics. A little of the right sort would be beneficial to both, particularly the latter. To say that all women were good and pure would be as nonsensical as to say that all men were bad, but statistics give her a decided advantage in the proportion who escape the penitentiaries. Is it not reasonable to suppose the ballot as safe in her hands as in those of her brother? You suggest a property qualification giving the ballot to taxpayers of both sexes. While there should doubtless be more adequate protection for taxpayers than we have now, this suggestion is deliciously masculine, on the same principle as those truly masculine tribunals who allowed the criminal who had "killed his man" to pose as a hero while the one who stole a horse was hanged with promptness and dispatch! Anarchists and socialists are no more common among women than among men but there are a few things of even more value than the always useful dollar. The home founded on true partnership is the foundation of all that is best in the state, and is not injured by a little well-regulated sentiment. There should be far less liability of family quarrels growing out of differences of opinion in politics when each has a voice in their final settlement than there is now. Consult "John" gladly, since in this case John is the most radical member of a suffrage family, but what of the multitude of women self-respecting and capable doing their share of the world's work with no John to consult, possibly because the right kind of John is rather scarce. "It is not good for man to be alone," even in politics, and the extension of the franchise to women would be quite as much to his benefit as that of his sisters. Now, truly, is not the real objection to be found in the fact that so many men do not wish to be benefited.

EDUCATION BOARDS FOR EVERY COUNTY

To Aid County Superintendent in Solving Rural School Problems is Advocated in Report.

The election of unsalaried county boards of education and the appointment by such boards of the county superintendent, is the substance of the announcement issued by the State Board of Public Affairs at Madison. After a very close examination of the rural schools for the past six months by a competent force of experienced school men, the board of public affairs has prepared a series of suggested administrative and legislative measures.

These recommendations have been submitted at various times to Wisconsin school men, school officials, and have called forth hearty approval and acceptance.

County board of education should be elected by the direct vote of the men and women at the spring election. The board would consist of three members. The term of office would be six years. To provide for the stable character of the board it is suggested that one member be elected every two years. The first board would choose by lot which of its members should serve for two, four and six years respectively. This board would serve without salary.

Among the most important duties of this county board of education would be the appointment of the county superintendent from an approved list made up by the state civil service commission. Among its other powers would be to exercise a general control over the county schools of agriculture and the county training schools for teachers; to pass upon the centralization of school districts; to withhold state aid from small and inefficient schools whenever in its judgment the facts warrant it; and to appoint an assistant to the county superintendent whenever the number of teachers in the districts exceeds one hundred.

It is recommended that state aid be given to these county boards of education in order that sufficiently large inducement may be offered to attract properly qualified men and women to the county superintendent and the provision of sufficient clerical and supervisory assistance.

SIDEWALK KETCHES.

TOBACCO.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

TOBACCO is one of the earliest American inventions, although very little of it is grown in this country without being disguised with Spanish nicknames or labeled as the product of the Turkish empire. As a result of this practice, millions of dollars' worth of smoking smokers are paying 50 cents per smoke for tobacco grown near Potosi, Wisconsin.

Tobacco was discovered one day by Sir Walter Raleigh, who used it to subdue the Virginia mosquito. Lord Raleigh found that by smoking vigorously in the face of a mosquito and striking him several times in succession with his fist, he could impair the animal's usefulness to quite an extent. When he returned to England he took a large quantity of tobacco with him, and some of it is still being smoked in the hotel lobbies.

Men never use tobacco except when requested to do so by their physician. It is a never-failing remedy, and will cure a patient of everything except secreting his personal correspondence and perfumed billet doux in the bottom drawer of the chiffonier, underneath a stack of socks.

Tobacco comes in three sizes—the pipe, the cigar and the cigarette. It doesn't require much tobacco to fill a pipe, but it requires several boxes of matches to keep one going for any length of time. When a pipe becomes old, it begins to wheeze, and has to be stoked with great frequency. It also exhales a very robust and pervasive aroma, before which a vacuum cleaner is as helpless as a refrigerator without ice.

The cigar is a form of compressed tobacco, of which there are two kinds—cigars which men smoke, and cigars which they give away. A gift cigar seldom burns for any distance without making the smoker cross-eyed in an attempt to maintain the draft.

The cigarette is composed of tobacco which is a cross between soft pine shavings and timothy hay, and is rolled in a felt manner at the rate of seven a minute. The Egyptian cigarette is an expensive variety made in Hoboken, New Jersey, and equipped with gold tips and the smoke's monogram. When used to excess, the cigarette will make a man's mind as flabby as the stock lamshank of an undertaker.

The Chronicles of Addington Peace

By D. FLETCHER ROBINSON
Author with A. Conan Doyle of The Hound of the Baskervilles
Copyright by W. G. Chapman

Peace brought out the words with a snap, but the keeper answered him without hesitation.

"That is the point, sir," he said. "That is why I am not responsible for the master's death. I set the gun at a level of eight inches from the ground, which I reckoned would take the fox about the shoulder. Some one altered the elevation of the muzzle after I had gone."

"The second forked stick that supported the gun was in the mud. Might it not have sunk under the weight, and thus raised the muzzle?"

"No, sir. I had pushed it through the mud down to the gravel. It was a good foot deeper when I went to look at it. A man must have used great force to get it so far through the gravel."

"What became of the gun?"
"After they carried Sir Andrew away, I must have gone off my head for awhile. What would they say to me for setting such a trap for my master? That was the only thing I could think about. I ran back and pulled up the sticks, and carried away the gun to the cottage here."

"But you saw the policeman arrest the man whom we may presume to be this murderer?"

"Yes, sir; but I was too wild to reason it out. I made up my mind this morning to tell them all about it at the inquest. That is the truth."

"Did you use the punt last night?"

"No, sir, it must have been the man that was caught. I missed her this morning, and after a search found her in the reeds near the island where she had drifted. Though I don't see how you could have known anything about the punt, sir."

"The iron-shod pole had chipped the landing-stage. The other man had ferried himself across rather than use the causeway. And now please fetch me the plans and the gun."

When Warner returned Peace slipped the envelope into his pocket, and examined the weapon with great care, snapping the lock twice.

"You had eased the trigger, eh?"

"Yes, sir; I thought a light pull would be best, so I oiled and loosened the screws."

The little man handed it back to him and turned away, staring over the lake towards the distant woodlands, with his hands clasped behind his back.

"That fellow, sir—he must have done it, don't you think?" asked the under-keeper.

"So it would seem, Warner," said Addington Peace over his shoulder.

It was eleven o'clock on the following day when Peace was announced. He was sitting in the garden of my friend's cottage smoking my pipe and reading the paper. From within the villa came the sound of whistling that told of my host working at his Academy picture.

"Why, Peace," I said, "what brings you here?"

He seated himself on a corner of the garden bench and lit a cigarette. "I went to London last night," he told me. "And as I had to pass your friend's house on the way from the station to Airle Hall, I thought I would call in and see you."

"Any further news?"

"I have had an interesting visit. The botanist with the beard has stepped into a leading part in our little tragedy, Mr. Phillips."

"Do you mean—"

"Yes, I believe him to be the murderer of Sir Andrew Cheyne."

"Then the man under arrest is innocent."

"That scarcely describes him—but he had no hand in this crime."

"Confound you and your riddles," I said. "Where is the murderer? Have you caught him?"

"There is a carriage at the door. If you care to come along perhaps I may be able to show him to you."

It was a swift horse from the stables of Airle Hall, and we covered the ground quickly. There was little talk between us. Twelve had struck when we stepped out at the overhanging porch of the old gray mansion and walked through into the library that overlooked the terrace and the lake. By the window, twisting his cap in his nervous fingers, stood Jake Warner. Peace nodded him a good morning, and then slipped away with a word of apology.

"The detective gentleman wired that he wanted to see me," said Warner, anxiously. "Do you know why, sir?"

"I told him no, and he dropped into an uneasy silence. I amused myself by walking from picture to picture, for the walls were hung with splendid portraits—Gainsborough, Lely and Romney—it was a veritable exhibition of those great masters. At last the door opened and the little man appeared, glancing from one to the other of us with his shrewd, observant eyes."

"Will you follow me, if you please?" he said.

We tramped up the great staircase, a wide sweep of polished oak, where a dozen men could have walked abreast, and so down a high-roofed passage into a majestic bedroom. In the center stood a venerable four-post bedstead. The columns that supported the canopy were finely carved, and over the head was a faded coat of arms pictured in the needlework of two hundred years ago. The lattice windows were open. From without came the faint piping of the nestling birds.

Upon the bed lay something covered with white sheeting.

Peace walked up to it and paused, staring hard at the keeper, who stood beside me. Then with a gentle hand he lifted the sheet. On the pillow lay the head of an elderly man, dark and full bearded.

Warner stepped back, clutching my arm.

"It's the botanist," he stammered. "What is he doing here? Was it him as killed my master, sir?"

"Yes," said the little detective; "he killed Sir Andrew Cheyne."

For a moment he stooped, busying himself about the head. With a gentle pull he lifted the heavy beard away. It was a face younger by a score of years than lay upon the pillows, a face handsome, after its fashion, though deep lined with evil days and ways.

"Sir Andrew himself," cried Warner, with a sob of terror.

"That is also true," said Inspector Addington Peace, reverently replacing the white sheet.

It was an hour afterwards that Peace gave me the details. We were leaning against the stone balustrade of the terrace looking over the lake to the pleasant park and beyond. The breeze-swept rushes that marked the line of the causeway, the gables of the island pavilion that peered above the foliage, lay to our right, framed in the rippling blue of the mere.

"My first important discovery," he said, "was a strand of pack-thread tied to a young sapling at the spot where the body of Sir Andrew was found. On the other side of the path was a narrow hole between the slabs of granite, where a peg had lately been driven in. The rushes about it were broken here and there. The conclusion of a spring gun was obvious, and the reason suggested by the track of foxes along the edge of the reeds. Was the death an accident, after all? If so, what business had the stranger under arrest—Fenton, I now find, is his name—upon the island at so late an hour?"

"My conversation with the keeper gave me some interesting results. It was plainly murder, and no accident. Some one had raised the muzzle of the gun so that it might kill a man and not a fox. Some one had expected a visitor to the island that night against whom he desired to revenge himself. Was Fenton guilty? The evidence against him seemed almost conclusive. He had admitted, you will remember, that he had an appointment with Sir Andrew. Yet, after he had set the trap, why had he continued to risk discovery by loitering about the causeway? Now had he known that the spring gun was there at all? Why had he brought a loaded revolver? Why had he borrowed the punt and reached the island by so unexpected a manner? Was he also afraid of some one or some thing? My mind began to turn from him to the second stranger, the botanist with the collecting case. He at least had information about the setting of the gun.

"There was still a further point. Sir Andrew had been shot full in the chest. If he had been walking down the causeway he would have been hit in the side. How was that?"

"Yesterday morning after I sent you away I walked into the village to make inquiries. They have few visitors, and the landlord of the inn remembered the bearded naturalist. He had only once visited the place, driving over from the station, and disappearing for several hours. A hot-tempered man, nervous and excitable—so he described him. When the cab was late he had broken out in a foreign tongue. That was all he knew of him."

"I caught the 3:15 to London and found Scotland Yard in the possession of some additional details. Sir Andrew had been in town for a fortnight living very quietly at a small hotel off Piccadilly. He had no servant with him. He had been a wild, extravagant lad, they told me, and when his uncle had tired of paying his bills he had tried the stage, got deeper into debt, and finally fled to the Continent, where he lived on a small allowance that the old man made him. All this struck me as curious. The rake had indeed reformed if he berailed his accession to great wealth by dropping a servant and living quietly in a small hotel. Had he other reasons than economy?"

"I visited the hotel that night. Sir Andrew had received few visitors, the porter told me. I described the botanist, without success. Then I tried Fenton. The porter recognized my description at once. He had called twice, the first time shortly after Sir Andrew's arrival, the second time on Tuesday evening. The waiter who had taken him up to the baronet's sitting-room told me that the first interview had been long, and that they had quarreled violently on the stairs."

"You shall never so much as see the place. If you go there before settling with me I communicate with the police at once." He remembered some such threat shouted by Fenton on leaving. The second interview had been short, and so far as he knew, friendly."

"I made a careful search of Sir Andrew's room. It was there that I solved the problem of the mystery; for in his dressing case was an old 'make-up' box, no doubt a survival from his days upon the stage; and in the box was a full brown beard!"

"And so he was the botanist?" I said with a shiver.

"Yes, Mr. Phillips, he was the botanist."

There was silence between us for a while. I looked up at the splendid front of the ancient hall, and then across the lawn, over the sparkling mere to the park and the forest lands beyond.

"Was it for this?" I asked with a wave of the hand.

"Yes," said Peace, "I believe it to have been for Airle Hall that he tried to kill Fenton. Heaven knows what dismal scandal the man held over him; but it was probably sufficient to drive Sir Andrew from England for ever. From inquiries that we have made, it appears that Fenton had been living on Sir Andrew for over two years. It was undoubtedly a bad case of blackmail. The young man, on hearing of his uncle's death, gave his persecutor the slip, and crossed to London. Fenton followed, and discovered him at his hotel. Probably he demanded a large sum, which was refused him. Whereupon he declared that the baronet should never so much as see Airle Hall unless he paid, and left the young man with that threat upon him."

"For days Sir Andrew stayed sulking in his rooms. He was a man of violent temper and unscrupulous past. Heaven knows what schemes of revenge he hatched in his rage and despair. Finally, on Monday last, he risked discovery, disguised himself in the beard and went down to see the old place again. His meeting with the keeper was a chance, and their talk of spring guns an equal accident. But the suggestion gave the baronet an idea. A spring gun for a fox—you remember his words as Warner told us. He laughed with hysterical joy at a means that would rid him of his enemy so simply and certainly. He made the excuse of the Indian friend, and saw Fenton again on Tuesday, giving him an appointment on the island at eleven o'clock on the following Thursday night, and at the same time promising to pay him what he asked at the meeting. By the last post on Wednesday he sent the plans to Warner in disguised handwriting and under a false name and address.

"Fenton suspected this sudden acquiescence. The scamp knew to what a state of impotent fury he had brought his victim. He took a revolver with him, and having spied out the ground, crossed by the punt, instead of approaching the rendezvous by the causeway. Also he came an hour and more before he was expected."

"Perhaps you now understand the plan. Sir Andrew intended to alter the gun and leave for the station before ten. Fenton would be killed at eleven, and the blame rest on Warner. No one could suspect the young baronet who would be in the train at the time of the accident."

"Sir Andrew found the trap, lifted the gun off the supporting props, and drove the outer one a foot deeper into the ground. I could see the marks of his feet, where he had stood while he pushed and twisted the stick through the clay. He replaced the gun, which would now be at an angle to hit a man in the chest or neck. He stepped back, looking to see if there was a sign of lurking death to alarm a passer-by."

"What happened I can only guess. He may have slipped on the old slabs. But it was enough that he touched the thread, and the trigger, oiled and eased by Warner, jarred off at once; it was in a manner suicide."

"So that is the explanation," I said, when he had ended.

"It is partly guess-work, of course," Peace told me; "but I think you will find that I am not far wrong when Fenton's trial comes on and, to save his neck, he makes a clean breast of his share in the business."

Character Revealed by Eyes.

Gray eyes denote creative temperament, but not always honesty. What the novelists and poets term the cold, gray eye is considered to be a sign of selfishness and cruelty, though it often denotes shrewdness and talent. Very clever people whose eyes are gray generally have small spots of orange in the iris round the pupil.

Janesville Daily Gazette, Oct. 3, 1872.—Brief Items:—Pliny Norcross speaks today to the farmers of Walworth.

J. C. Abbott, "Lecturer Iowa State Grange Patrons of Husbandry," is in the city. His mission is the establishment of "granges" among the farmers of Wisconsin for the protection and promotion of their educational, pecuniary interests.

We are requested to remind people who are in the habit of driving across the bridges at a rapid rate, that they are violating a city ordinance. A couple of signs on each bridge proclaim this warning: "Five dollars fine for driving faster than a walk over this bridge."

BY WALT MASON

One works all day and earns two dollars, and when the toilsome day is spent, his cheap tin dinner pail he collars and homebound goes, serene, content. As he devours his evening porridge he counts the blessings he enjoys; he has a neat, unimpaired body; a well filled with happy girls and boys; his wife, with disposition sunny, is singing as she dances round; each week he saves a little money and puts it safely in the pound. In worldly blessings he's as wealthy as any plute in all the land; he thanks his gods that he is healthy, and always has a job on hand. One works an hour and earns ten dollars, and then cavorts around the town, and wrings his hands and shrieks and boiles, and tells how he is trampled down. He is, he says, the martyred victim of grafters who too long have stoned; the Wall Street barons deftly kicked him, and Government sat by and grinned. His feelings have been badly dented, his dearest corns are sadly pinched, and he will never be contented until some congressmen are lynched. The men with pockets full of guilders are they who storm around the stage; the toilers, yeomen, diggers, builders, contented work and draw their wage.

Fatherly Pride.

"Is he proud of his baby boy?"
"Proud of him? I should say he is. Why, he spent two hours yesterday trying to imagine how he'll look in a silk hat!"

A pathetic marriage ceremony took place the other day, in a Budapest hospital. A German singer named Erdos, who was appearing professionally in the Hungarian capital, was suddenly taken ill with heart weakness a few days ago. He telegraphed to his sweetheart in Frankfurt, Germany, to come to him. The girl started at once, and arrived in Budapest promptly. They were married immediately in the hospital ward, and Erdos died an hour after the ceremony.

Harry Berger and Ed. Meyer Held for Muder of Matilda Bergsterman

Two Youths Arrested This Morning Admit They Attacked Dead Woman After Taking Father Home Last Monday Night and She Was Dead When They Finished With Her.

Taken Into Court and Their Examinations Set For Wednesday October Ninth At Ten O'clock. They were Remanded to Jail Without Bail Charged With The Murder Of The Dead Woman

Mystery surrounding the manner in which Matilda Bergsterman met her death on the night of Monday, September 30, was cleared up in three days when Chief of Police George Appleby this morning placed under arrest Harry F. Berger and Ed. Meyer, two youths living near the Bergsterman home, and they confessed to the chief in the police station that after they had committed a statutory offense upon the woman she was dead.

The arrests were made as the result of good detective work on the part of the chief, who made inquiries as to who had gone to the Finley saloon on the night of the woman's death, and discovered that Meyer and Berger had taken Bergsterman home.

In a statement this morning the chief said: "Under the existing conditions at the time we first investigated I thought from Bergsterman's statement that he knew more than he was willing to admit."

But after the doctors had expressed their opinion and told of the nature of the wounds on the woman's body, I made up my mind that Bergsterman was not responsible and began to look for some younger person.

Myers was arrested shortly after seven o'clock this morning at the store of Roesling Bros., where he was employed as a chauffeur on the motor delivery truck. Berger was taken at the factory of the Parker Pen company a little after eight o'clock, and the two young men were taken to the police station.

There Chief of Police Appleby told them that he had evidence to the effect that they had taken Bergsterman home on Monday night and had afterwards been out with Matilda Bergsterman.

According to story boys accompanied Fred Bergsterman home from saloon Monday evening, met the girl and that she gave the consent for their criminal assault. Scratches on Myer's face however, indicate that she must have struggled.

When they finished abusing her they carried the dead body into the house and laid it on the couch near the father who pulled her off and beat the body.

Their testimony is similar to the tale told by the prisoner to police but the stories are lacking in actual details although both boys tell practically the same story.

MONTREAL WIFE SLAYER WILL HANG TOMORROW

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Montreal, Oct. 3.—Apparently reconciled to his fate, though with little left of the iron nerve that he displayed throughout his trial, John Cummings, the wife slayer, is awaiting the dawn of tomorrow when he will mount the scaffold in the Montreal jail to pay the penalty of the law. The crime for which he is to be executed was committed on November 21 last. Early in the evening of that day Cummings approached his wife, with whom he had not been living for some time, as she was walking in the street with a young man, and fired two shots killing her almost instantly. The evidence showed that Cummings had been drinking on the day of the murder, and that he had previously made threats against his wife.

HEADQUARTERS ARE OPENED IN OSHKOSH

William H. Bray Will Conduct Spirited Campaign in State for Taft's Election.

William H. Bray of Oshkosh, appointed manager of the Taft campaign in Wisconsin by the republican national committee at a meeting in Chicago, Monday, will open headquarters in Oshkosh today, and will begin an active campaign at once. Branch headquarters will be established in Milwaukee county, and probably in Madison, early next week, but everything pertaining to the campaign will be conducted from Oshkosh.

Mr. Bray will be assisted by George P. Hambrecht of Grand Rapids, H. H. Morgan of Madison, and by supporters of the president in every county. Taft clubs will be organized throughout the state and congressional district organizations formed.

Detailed Plans Not Ready.

Mr. Bray, who was in Milwaukee yesterday, when asked as to his plans, said:

"This appointment has come so suddenly that I have not had time to decide on detailed plans.

"Ordinarily the republican national committeemen for Wisconsin, co-operating with the republican state central committee, would be expected to take charge of the presidential, as well as of the state campaign, but so far nothing has been done in this state to further President Taft's candidacy, and the time is so short that immediate action is necessary."

Depend on Local Orators.

"Generally speaking," the campaign will be one of advertisement, speech-making and distribution of campaign literature. I shall endeavor to secure from the national committee the best speakers available, but will probably have to depend upon local orators to do most of the work.

"President Taft's friends may rest assured that, to the extent of my ability, I will do my utmost to assure victory for him in Wisconsin, but friends should also fully realize that nothing can be accomplished without their earnest and unflinching support. I realize the responsibility I undertake in accepting this appointment from the national committee, but I ask all loyal republicans to assist me and I shall expect support from all who believe as I do that the re-election of President Taft is of most vital importance, not only to our own state but to the nation as well."

Assume Entire Responsibility.

"While accepting the responsibility of this appointment, I want it known that I also assume the entire responsibility for the manner in which this campaign is conducted. Whatever criticism may be made regarding the management of the Taft campaign in Wisconsin, no one will ever have any reason whatever to make any charge that this campaign has not been cleanly and honestly conducted.

"The republican national committee does not wish to interfere in our state politics, and I shall therefore confine my efforts strictly to the election of the national ticket."

CONFESSES TO TWO DETROIT OUTRAGES

Man Held By Police Admits He Murdered 12 Year Old Girl Last Tuesday And Another Child Three Years Ago.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 3.—If the story which George Brown Spengler told last night proves to be true the mysterious crime which has puzzled the Detroit police and detectives for nearly three years has been cleared up.

Spengler, a laborer, thirty years old, was arrested in connection with the murder of twelve-year old Matilda Reis, whose mutilated body was found in an alley near the girl's home last Tuesday night. He confessed not only to having killed and mistreated this child but told the police also he had mistreated and murdered Helen Brown, eleven years old, whose body was found in a coal yard on Dec. 12, 1909.

Four other girls have been attacked in Detroit in the last thirteen months. One of them was permanently injured and the other left seriously hurt. Spengler admitted his guilt in two of the offenses. In each case the child was attacked as she lay sleeping in her parent's home.

For more than three years a succession of attacks on women and girls has puzzled local police officials. Women have been knocked down and dragged into dark alleys. With Spengler's confession, it was at first thought that the mysterious "browler" had been discovered, but early today, detectives stated that it was their belief that Spengler was not the perpetrator of these outrages.

ADJOURNED CASE TO SATURDAY MORNING

Coroner's Jury Took Adjournment After Hearing Testimony Yesterday Afternoon.

Adjournment in the hearing of testimony before the coroner's jury of six investigating the death of Matilda Bergsterman was taken yesterday afternoon at four o'clock after the testimony of all the witnesses summoned had been heard. This action was taken at the request of District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie, who asked that a couple of days further time to continue his investigations be given him to see if other witnesses could be secured who might tell something that would throw additional light on the case of the woman's death.

In the testimony yesterday afternoon, Chief of Police Appleby was called to tell of his investigation of the woman's death, and the arrest of Bergsterman at the home. Miles Fanning, bartender at a saloon on River street, testified that Bergsterman had been in his place from about seven o'clock until closing time on Monday evening, and that the man had been slightly intoxicated when he entered the saloon. He said Bergsterman was not badly intoxicated when he left at eleven o'clock, having slept part of the evening. Eugene Roessling of the firm of Roessling Bros. told that Bergsterman had come to the rear door of his home over the store about half past twelve or one o'clock Tuesday morning, but by the time Mr. Roessling had got to the door, Bergsterman was going down the back steps. Going to the front part of his house, Mr. Roessling had recognized the man as he passed under the electric light, but did not call him back as he thought Bergsterman was drunk. H. Nelson, the undertaker, who took charge of the body, testified as to the condition of the clothing worn by Miss Bergsterman.

Ben Bergsterman brother of the victim of Monday night's tragedy, was the one who saw her last on Thursday night. He testified that as he was standing in front of a restaurant on Milwaukee street, she had passed him, apparently on her way home. She spoke to him as she passed, he said, but he had not talked to her. Bergsterman said he had not lived with his father and sister for about two years, leaving them when the home was broken up and they were preparing to move from South Third street.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

In the Janesville Gazette of Sept. 23th, I noticed an anti-suffrage editorial so unusually bad that I venture to review. Has it occurred to you that the adult population of California will be fairly represented for the first time at a presidential election, this fall? If the guess is correct and the state vote is doubled, what becomes of the next proposition, namely, that a much larger number of women than men are indifferent to political matters and densely ignorant concerning them? So long as women have no voice in the government the position of the Janesville women who refused to endorse at Mrs. Foster's invitation was both natural and dignified. You state broadly that there is no sentiment in business, and less in politics. A little of the right sort would be beneficial to both, particularly the latter. To say that all women were good and pure would be a gross misstatement. Any that all men were bad, but statistics give her a decided advantage in the proportion who escape the penitentiaries. Is it not reasonable to suppose the ballot as safe in her hands as in those of her brother? You suggest a property qualification giving the ballot to taxpayers of both sexes. While there should doubtless be more adequate protection for taxpayers than we have now, this suggestion is deliciously masculine, on the same principle as those truly masculine criminals who allowed the criminal who had "killed his man" to pose as a hero while the one who stole a horse was hanged with promptness and dispatch! Anarchists and socialists are no more common among women than among men but there are a few things of even more value than the always useful dollar. The home founded on a true partnership is the foundation of all that is best in the state, and is not injured by a little well-regulated sentiment. There should be far less liability of family quarrels growing out of differences of opinion in politics when each has a voice in their final settlement than there is now. Consult John is the most radical member of a suffrage family, but what of the multitude of women self-respecting and capable doing their share of the world's work with no John to consult, possibly because the right kind of John is rather scarce. "It is not good for man to be alone," even in politics, and the extension of the franchise to women would be quite as much to his benefit as that of his sisters. Now, truly, is not the real objection to be found in the fact that so many men do not wish to be benefited.

EDUCATION BOARDS FOR EVERY COUNTY

To Aid County Superintendent in Solving Rural School Problems is Advocated in Report.

The election of unsalaried county boards of education and the appointment by such boards of the county superintendent, is the substance of the announcement issued by the State Board of Public Affairs at Madison. After a very close examination of the rural schools for the past six months by a competent force of experienced school men, the board of public affairs has prepared a series of suggested administrative and legislative measures.

These recommendations have been submitted at various times to Wisconsin school men, school officials, and have called forth hearty approval and acceptance.

County board of education should be elected by the direct vote of the men and women at the spring election. The board would consist of three members. The term of office would be six years. To provide for the stable character of the board it is suggested that one member be elected every two years. The first board would choose by lot which of its members should serve for two, four and six years respectively. This board would serve without salary.

Among the most important duties of this county board of education would be the appointment of the county superintendent from an approved list made up by the state civil service commission. Among its other powers would be to exercise a general control over the county schools of agriculture and the county training schools for teachers; to pass upon the centralization of school districts; to advise the superintendent to withhold state aid from small and inefficient schools whenever in its judgment the facts warrant it and to appoint an assistant to the county superintendent whenever the number of teachers in the districts exceeds one hundred.

It is recommended that state aid be given to these county boards of education in order that sufficiently large inducement may be offered to attract properly qualified men and women to the county superintendent and the provision of sufficient clerical and supervisory assistance.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

TOBACCO.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

TOBACCO is one of the earliest American inventions, although very little of it is grown in this country without being disguised with Spanish nicknames or labeled as the product of the Turkish empire. As a result of this practice, millions of discerning smokers are paying 50 cents per smoke for tobacco grown near Polotsk, Wisconsin.

Tobacco was discovered one day by Sir Walter Raleigh, who used it to subvert the Virginia mosquito. Lord Raleigh found that by smoking vigorously in the face of a mosquito and then striking him several times in succession with his fist, he could impair the animal's usefulness to quite an extent. When he returned to England he took a large quantity of tobacco with him, and some of it is still being smoked in the hotel lobbies.

Men never use tobacco except when requested to do so by their physician. It is a never-failing remedy, and will cure a patient of everything except secreting his personal correspondence and performing billiard stunts in the bottom drawer of the chiffonier, underneath a stack of socks.

Tobacco comes in three sizes—the pipe, the cigar and the cigarette. It doesn't require much tobacco to fill a pipe, but it requires several boxes of matches to keep one going for any length of time. When a pipe becomes old, it begins to wheeze, and has to be stoked with great frequency. It also exhales a very robust and pervasive aroma, before which a vacuum cleaner or is as helpless as a refrigerator without ice.

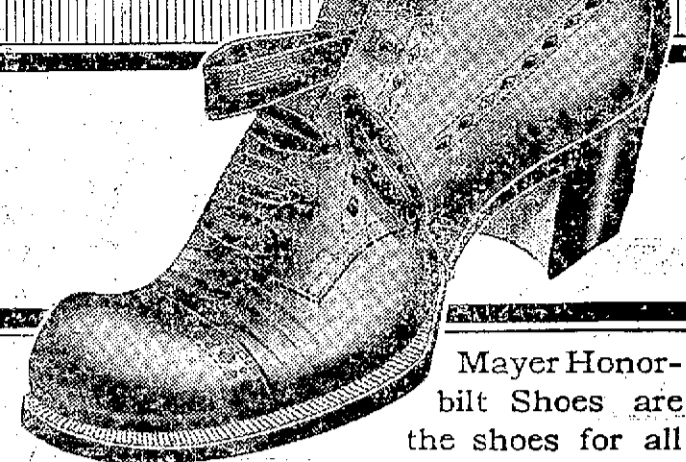

The cigar is a form of compressed tobacco, of which there are two kinds—cigars which men smoke, and cigars which they give away. A gift cigar seldom burns for any distance without making the smoker cross-eyed in an attempt to maintain the draft.

The cigarette is composed of tobacco which is a cross between soft pine shavings and Timothy hay, and is rolled in a deft manner at the rate of seven a minute. The Egyptian cigarette is an expensive variety made in Hoboken, New Jersey, and equipped with gold tips and the smoke's message. When used to excess, the cigarette will make a man's mind as flabby as the stock, handshake, of an undertaker.

The Chronicles of Addington Peace

By B. FLETCHER ROBINSON
Co-Author with H. Conan Doyle of 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' etc.
Copyright by H. G. Chapman

Peace brought out the words with a snarl, but the keeper answered him without hesitation.

"That is the point, sir," he said. "That is why I am not responsible for the master's death. I set the gun at a level of eight inches from the ground, which I reckoned would take the fox about the shoulder. Some one altered the elevation of the muzzle after I had gone."

"The second forked stick that supported the gun was in the mud. Might it not have sunk under the weight, and thus raised the muzzle?"
"No, sir. I had pushed it through the mud down to the gravel. It was a good foot deeper when I went to look at it. A man must have used great force to get it so far through the gravel."

"What became of the gun?"
"After they carried Sir Andrew away, I must have gone off my head for awhile. What would they say to me for setting such a trap for my master? That was the only thing I could think about. I ran back and pulled up the sticks, and carried away the gun to the cottage here."

"But you saw the policeman arrest the man whom we may presume to be the murderer?"

"Yes, sir; but I was too wild to reason it out. I made up my mind this morning to tell them all about it at the inquest. That is the truth."

"Did you use the punt last night?"

"No, sir. It must have been the man that was caught. I missed her this morning, and after a search found her in the reeds near the island where she had drifted. Though I don't see how you could have known anything about the punt, sir."

"The iron-shod pole had chipped the landing-stage. The other man had ferried himself across rather than use the causeway. And now please fetch me the plans and the gun."

When Warner returned Peace slipped the envelope into his pocket, and examined the weapon with great care, snapping the lock twice.

"You had eased the trigger, eh?"

"Yes, sir; I thought a light pull would be best, so I oiled and loosened the screws."

The little man handed it back to him and turned away, staring over the lake towards the distant woodlands, with his hands clasped behind his back.

"That fellow, sir—he must have done it, don't you think?" asked the under-keeper.

"So it would seem, Warner," said Addington Peace over his shoulder.

It was eleven o'clock on the following day when Peace was announced. I was sitting in the garden of my friend's cottage smoking my pipe and reading the paper. From within the villa came the sound of whistling that told of my host working at his Academy picture.

"Why, Peace," I said, "what brings you here?"

He seated himself on a corner of the garden bench and lit a cigarette.

"I went to London last night," he told me. "And as I had to pass your friend's house on the way from the station to Airie Hall, I thought, I would call in and see you."

"Any further news?"

"I have had an interesting visit. The botanist with the beard has stepped into a leading part in our little tragedy, Mr. Phillips."

"Do you mean—"

"Yes, I believe him to be the murderer of Sir Andrew Cheyne."

"Then the man under arrest is innocent."

"That scarcely describes him—but he had no hand in this crime."

"Confound you and your riddles," I said. "Where is the murderer? Have you caught him?"

you can remember, that he had an appointment with Sir Andrew. Yet, after he had set the trap, why had he continued to risk discovery by loitering about the causeway? How had he known that the spring gun was there at all? Why had he brought a loaded revolver? Why had he borrowed the punt and reached the island by so unexpected a manner? Was he also afraid of some one or some thing? My mind began to turn from him to the second stranger, the botanist with the collecting case. He at least had information about the setting of the gun.

"There was still a further point. Sir Andrew had been shot full in the chest. If he had been walking down the causeway he would have been hit in the side. How was that?"

"Yesterday morning after I sent you away I walked into the village to make inquiries. They have few visitors, and the landlord of the Inn remembered the bearded naturalist. He had only once visited the place, driving over from the station, and disappearing for several hours. A hot-tempered man, nervous and excitable—so he described him. When the cab was late he had broken out in a foreign tongue. That was all he knew of him."

"I caught the 3:15 to London, and found Scotland Yard in the possession of some additional details. Sir Andrew had been in town for a fortnight living very quietly at a small hotel off Piccadilly. He had no servant with him. He had been a wild, extravagant lad, they told me, and when his uncle had tired of paying his bills he had tried the stage, got deeper into debt, and finally fled to the Continent, where he lived on a small allowance that the old man made him. All this struck me as curious. The rake had indeed reformed if he heralded his accession to great wealth by dropping a servant and living quietly in a small hotel. Had he other reasons than economy?"

"I visited the hotel that night. Sir Andrew had received few visitors, the porter told me. I described the botanist, without success. Then I tried Fenton. The porter recognized my description at once. He had called twice, the first time shortly after Sir Andrew's arrival, the second time on Tuesday evening. The waiter who had taken him up to the baronet's sitting-room told me that the first interview had been long, and that they had quarreled violently on the stairs."

"You shall never so much as see the place. If you go there before settling with me I communicate with the police at once." He remembered some such threat shouted by Fenton on leaving. The second interview had been short, and, so far as he knew, friendly.

"I made a careful search of Sir Andrew's room. It was there that I solved the problem of the mystery; for in his dressing case was an old 'make-up' box, no doubt a survival from his days upon the stage; and in the box was a full brown beard!"

"And so he was the botanist?" I said with a shiver.

"Yes, Mr. Phillips, he was the botanist."

There was silence between us for a while. I looked up at the splendid front of the ancient hall, and then across the lawns, over the sparkling mere to the park and the forest lands beyond.

"Was it for this?" I asked with a wave of the hand.

"Yes," said Peace, "I believe it to have been for Airie Hall that he tried to kill Fenton. Heaven knows what dismal scandal the man held over him; but it was probably sufficient to drive Sir Andrew from England for ever. From inquiries that we have made, it appears that Fenton had been living on Sir Andrew for over two years. It was undoubtedly a bad case of blackmail. The young man, on hearing of his uncle's death, gave his persecutor the slip, and crossed to London. Fenton followed, and discovered him at his hotel. Probably he demanded a large sum, which was refused him. Whereupon he declared that the baronet should never so much as see Airie Hall unless he paid, and left the young man with that threat upon him."

"For days Sir Andrew stayed sulking in his rooms. He was a man of violent temper and unscrupulous past. Heaven knows what schemes of revenge he hatched in his rage and despair. Finally, on Monday last, he risked discovery, disguised himself in the beard and went down to see the old place again. His meeting with the keeper was a chance, and their talk of spring guns an equal accident. But the suggestion gave the baronet an idea. A spring gun for a fox—you remember his words as Warner told us. He laughed with hysterical joy at a means that would rid him of his enemy so simply and certainly. He made the excuse of the Indian friend, and saw Fenton again on Tuesday, giving him an appointment on the island at eleven o'clock on the following Thursday night, and at the same time promising to pay him what he asked at the meeting. By the last post on Wednesday he sent the plans to Warner in disguised handwriting and under a false name and address.

"Fenton suspected this sudden acquiescence. The scamp knew to what a state of impotent fury he had brought his victim. He took a revolver with him, and having spied out the ground, crossed by the punt, instead of approaching the rendezvous by the causeway. Also he came an hour and more before he was expected."

"Perhaps you now understand the plan. Sir Andrew intended to alter the gun and leave for the station before ten. Fenton would be killed at eleven, and the blame rest on Warner. No one could suspect the young baronet who would be in the train at the time of the accident."

"Sir Andrew found the trap, lifted the gun off the supporting props, and drove the outer one a foot deeper into the ground. I could see the marks of his feet, where he had stood while he pushed and twisted the stick through the clay. He replaced the gun, which would now be at an angle to hit a man in the chest or neck. He stepped back, looking to see if there was a sign of lurking death to alarm a passer-by."

"What happened I can only guess. He may have slipped on the old slabs. But it was enough that he touched the thread, and the trigger, oiled and eased by Warner, jarred off at once. It was in a manner suicide."

"So that is the explanation," I said, when he had ended.

"It is partly guess-work, of course," Peace told me; "but I think you will find that I am not far wrong when Fenton's trial comes on and, to save his neck, he makes a clean breast of his share in the business."

Why the Millennium Didn't Come

THE millennium was sitting on the edge of a fluffy cloud. "I think," it said as it looked downward, "it would be a good thing for me to visit the earth. Seems to me that old planet needs me pretty badly."

It peered through the blue and saw straight into Mrs. Hawkins' home. "Be nice to that mean Mrs. Snodgrass?" she was saying to her husband. "What do you take me for? She is one of those nasty, catty women who are always saying horrid things in a soft, purring way. Indeed, I'm not going to invite her. If we'd all just cut her it would do her a lot of good."

"Maybe if you were all kind to her and didn't take any notice of what she said," suggested her husband mildly, "she'd get over being so catty, as you call it."

"Not a bit of it. She'd think we wanted to curry favor, and she'd be worse than ever. The men take her side because she's pretty."

Mr. Hawkins subsided. And the millennium sighed a bit and looked in another direction.

This time its gaze went straight into a business office.

A gray-haired man with a stubby mustache was sitting looking at a typewritten letter and drumming with his fingers on the table.

"So Harmon's going to make a slashing big cut in his dry goods, is he, right in the beginning of the season? They say he's pretty close to the wall, and he's got to have money. Well, I know where I can get some goods that'll make his sale look like a collapsed toy balloon along side a dirigible. To be sure, I don't need the money. I'm getting on all right. But business is business. A fellow can't afford to be sentimental."

He reached for the phone. "Hello, Bonwit, Cluett & Co.? Mr. Bonwit, please. Hello, Mr. Bonwit. This is Hawkins. I'll accept that offer you made me on those goods. Yes, I'll send a letter. Not at all. Good-bye."

The millennium sighed once more and looked in another direction. This time it saw into the wealthy home of Mrs. Dallas. Mrs. Dallas, in an exquisite negligee all fine handwork and rare lace, was showing her bosom friend, Mrs. Ruppel, a necklace Mr. Dallas had given her on her birthday, the day before.

"He's been a year, mind you, collecting the pearls. Really the cost of it is fabulous. I told him he shouldn't be so extravagant. But isn't it superb?"

"It's magnificent," exclaimed the other. "I believe it's the finest in the country."

"That's what the jeweler told Mr. Dallas. What is it, Marie?" she said impatiently, turning to the maid who had entered.

The maid gave her a card. "The Rev. James Hunsiker," she read. "What a nuisance. He's pestering the life out of me to give something to a home for convalescents or incurables or something. Tell him I'm engaged. Really," she said, turning to her friend. "I would beggar myself if I gave to all the people who ask."

"I know," replied her friend. "It's perfectly awful. They just seem to think you're made of money."

Again the millennium sighed. "I'm a pretty good sort," it said, "and I'd make things pretty nice down there. But I don't believe I'm wanted." Then it pushed a button and the cloud moved on.

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pains, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in quinine and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equalled. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

He is very nice and I would not care to give him up. Please tell me what to do.

K. E. F.

If you were older, my dear, and possessed of good judgment, I should tell you to follow your heart. But a girl of 17 is not as wise as her mother, and mother undoubtedly sees something of considerable disadvantage in this young man or she would not oppose your friendship with him. So be guided by your mother until you know a little more about the world and the kind of men that live in it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a girl of 18. I have been visiting a certain theater for quite a while and have taken a liking to one of the ushers. We have spoken to each other many times, though we have not had a proper introduction. When by chance we meet on the street he always recognizes me. I do not know his name and he does not know mine.

I am giving a party and would like to invite him. I know the owner of the theater. Do you think it would be proper for me to get the usher's name and address from the owner and send him an "invite"? I would like to get better acquainted with him.

HOPEFUL.

Ask the theater manager what he knows of this young man. If the report is good, tell him you would like to meet the usher. He can arrange an introduction. Then send the invitation to the young man. You can not invite him otherwise without losing his respect.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am 27 years old and a divorced man. Last April I met a young lady and saw her three nights a week for three weeks ago, when we had a quarrel. I wrote her a letter and three cards and she didn't answer them, but she called me up and I met her and she said she waited a week and didn't hear from me and met another fellow and is going out with him now.

She always said she liked me and I asked her how she would like to keep a flat for us both. She said, "All right." But now she says she is engaged to this other young man. How can I win her back?

ANTHONY.

The young lady couldn't have liked you very well or she would not have become engaged to another young man in such a hurry. Better give her up and look for somebody more certain of her own mind.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am troubled with hoarseness in my throat but have no cold or cough. Please tell me some home remedy. Reader, Take a swallow of lemon juice, or beat up the white of an egg and swallow it slowly.

A CHAPTER ON ROLLS.

There is no bread which seems quite so nice or is so well liked for any and all occasions as good rolls. There are so many varieties that one may change the form and flavor and have something new each day, it desired.

Finger Rolls.—Mix a cup of scalded milk with a tablespoonful of butter and one of sugar, add salt and half a yeast cake, dissolved in half a cup of warm water, then add four enough to knead, and knead fifteen minutes or until it is springy, and light to the touch; set to rise four hours in a warm place. When light, roll in balls, then into cylinders on a floured board. Arrange in a shallow pan, and let rise until double in size, and bake until a golden brown. Glaze with beaten egg and a sprinkling of sugar.

Kentucky Rolls.—Mix together a half yeast cake dissolved in a half cup of warm water, four cups of flour, a teaspoonful of salt, half a cup of lard, a tablespoonful of sugar and enough milk and water to make a batter. Let it rise in a warm place, add flour enough to knead, then set to rise again. When light, knead, shape and set to rise again, then when light bake in a hot oven.

Bath Buns.—Dissolve a yeast cake in two cups of warm water; add enough flour to make a moderately stiff sponge and let rise about two hours. Cream together one and a half cups of butter and sugar, add a couple of luke warm water, a pinch of salt and two eggs well beaten. Mix with the sponge, let rise, then knead, shape into buns, arrange them close in a baking pan and let rise until very light. Bake in a moderate oven.

Swedish Rolls.—Use any plain roll mixture, and when shaping for the last rising, roll the dough very thin and spread with butter, sprinkle with sugar, cinnamon and currants; roll up and cut in half-inch slices; let rise until double in bulk, then bake in a moderate oven.

Nellie Maxwell.

To Can Wild Plums. Wash them good, then put on the stove to boil with water just enough to cover them. When they have boiled fifteen or twenty minutes, add one level teaspoon of soda in every gallon of fruit. Do not add sugar, because it hardens them. Can in sterilized jars. When ready to use, they may be pitted and sweetened, to taste.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS By DR. T. J. ALLEN Food Specialist

CONDITIONS OF LONGEVITY.

In his good work on "The Prolongation of Life," Prof. Metchnikoff, director of the Pasteur Institute, has aimed to show that diet is the essential condition for longevity—and therefore for efficiency—particularly but not exclusively, in the case of man. He overlooked the importance of the mental condition, the avoidance of worry. Some hold that optimism depends upon the physical condition; others insist that it is unnecessary to pay any attention to diet, exercise, and other physical conditions, providing the mental attitude is right; that all disease is in the mind, and that it can be cured by right thinking. Both positions are extreme. The body constantly influences the mind, and the mind the body. In fact, the relations are inseparable, dual—unitary. Mrs. Fannie Friedman, who recently died in New York at the age of 112, placed first among the rules of good living, "Don't worry." Many who have reached an advanced age have been addicted to the use of alcohol, but have been distinguished by a care-free spirit. Good nutrition is dependent as much upon good mental condition as upon good food. Fear stops the secretions upon which digestion depends, while "contentment therewith" insures good digestion.

The Evening Chit-Chat BY RUTH CAMERON

IF MEN DID WOMEN'S WORK. DON'T you think it would be a grand thing, if for a short space of time—a month perhaps—every housewife in the land could leave her kitchen and her household and let the men folks do her work? If such a thing were possible, I think a great many good results would be brought to pass.

One would be that some men would cease to wonder what their wives did with their time.

Another would be that some men would realize that the money they have thought themselves generous in giving their wives was entirely inadequate pay for the work they have been doing.

And another result—and this is the point which I want to bring out today, especially—would be that much better equipments for housework would be immediately installed in the homes. For no man would put up for a month with the makeshifts and make-works which the average woman endures.

One morning I chanced to be in the kitchen of a woman who does all the work for her family of eight. She was making the toast which is invariably part of their breakfast. In turning the toaster she dropped two pieces of bread and burned her hand getting them back. "I'm always doing that," she exclaimed. "It's that horrid old toaster. It's been broken for months and I ought to get a new one." And a new toaster would probably have cost about a quarter.

I remember in our own kitchen an obstinate egg beater which struggled frantically against performing its duty. At a conservative reckoning it must have taken twice as long to beat an egg with that instrument of nerve torture as it should have. Yet we made shift with that miserable thing for at least a year. And you can get a good egg beater for twenty cents!

The other day I assisted with the dish washing in a summer cottage. There was no scourer. There had not been any all summer. That meant that it had taken about three times as long to wash the pots and kettles every day. Again and again I have heard that woman complain that she didn't get as much time to be out of doors as she had hoped. And a scourer would cost ten cents!

Housework is hard work at best; its infinite demands eat up an astonishing amount of time. All too many women have sad reason to quote—

"Man's work is from sun to sun,
But woman's work is never done."

Surely then every housewife ought to have the best possible equipment. Sometimes their failure to do so is due to economy; sometimes it's just carelessness. If it's economy, it's false economy; if it's carelessness, it's very foolish and a waste of energy.

Every woman owes it to herself and her family to have as much time for rest and recreation as possible. The intelligent, modern woman is coming to realize this and to know that perfect equipment will help her. A professor's wife who decided to enlarge her husband's income by doing her own work, at once perfected her regulation equipment and added to it a wireless cooker, a dish washer and a vacuum cleaner.

Men insist that they cannot do their work satisfactorily unless they have the best possible equipment.

Why shouldn't women make the same demands?

HOUSEHOLD TALKS by Henrietta D. Grauer

It is no longer economical to make vinegar at home, though it is an article of great profit and easily made. However, it is surprising that there are so few vinegars of various flavors seen upon our tables.

The flavoring of herb vinegars is a simple process; a few herbs are put in a bottle, some well flavored vinegar poured over them and the whole heated in a bain-marie; this is all that is necessary and a good store of spice and herb vinegar is of great value, not alone in salads, but in sauce making and cooking in general.

A few years ago vinegar was made entirely from apple cider; how many methods are resorted to, to manufacture it in the cheapest manner. It is even produced by mixing molasses and water and pouring them over shavings of red oak wood and then letting them ferment. Sulphuric acid diluted with water; a common commercial vinegar until the pure food law requirements demanded that all vinegar should contain at least 5 per cent of acetic acid.

A standard and reliable article is made from malt and cider vinegar may be had from careful grocers everywhere. In Canada a delightful vinegar is made from maple sugar but this is little known in this part of the country.

So injurious is impure, acid vinegar that many persons use the juice of lemons to impart sharpness to their food; as it has not undergone fermentation it naturally commends itself to those who are interested in the hygiene of their family.

The Heinz recipe for best table vinegar is said to be the following: Place three gallons best cider vinegar in a cask and add three pounds of strained honey. Cover and let stand eight weeks when it should be strained into bottles and corked. This is said to be so strong that it requires diluting one half.

Renowned tarragon vinegar is made with fresh or dried tarragon leaves; it gives a zest to salads that is appreciated by the French but not by those good livered alone. Every salad lover praises it and pays seventy-five cents for a half pint bottle if they have not learned to make it themselves.

Pick the leaves from the stalk and wash well; put a cup of them into a pint bottle and cover with warm vinegar and place where it will remain warm a few hours. Then cork and let stand for two weeks, strain into cruet as needed.

It is excellent on fish as well as in salads. A small plant of tarragon may be grown in even a small city yard and the cheapest meat dish is improved by adding a few of the leaves as you would use parsley.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS by Edna K. Woolley

MISSING THE SWEETEST HOURS. The other evening I had occasion to wait some time for a car at a corner opposite a brightly-lighted picture theater. It is a busy corner, situated in one of the residence sections of the city, and the crowds that passed in and out of the theater were representative of that solid "middle class" which is said to be the bulwark of a nation.

Now nobody is to be condemned for going to a moving picture show. The shows are entertaining and often educational, and the entrance fee is small. In their way, they are something of a blessing. But what amazed me was the number of babies and very small children who were taken into this particular show by their parents while I waited there. The children were too young to enjoy the pictures, and it's to be presumed that their parents took them along rather than stay at home with them or leave them in the care of others.

Of course mother and father need a little recreation now and then; but it is wise, or in the path of their duty, to take it at the expense of these little ones who should be at home and tucked in their little beds; instead of breathing in the vitiated atmosphere of a room crowded with human beings, and keeping strained eyes open upon a flickering screen?

"No wonder the children are nervous," said Grandmother. "It's no place for babies. Children ought to have their regular going-to-bed time and a good night's sleep, if they are to grow up strong and healthy. But nowadays mothers are keeping their children up all hours, just because it's more convenient. I call it plain selfishness."

"It seems to me," she went on, in her gentle voice, "that a mother and father could find more real fun at home with the babies than taking them to a place like that. Now I know when my children were little, their father just enjoyed playing with them before they were put to bed, and somehow we always had happy evenings together at home. It seemed the nicest place to us, and the children thought so, too, as they grew up."

But these days everybody seems to try to get away from home just as much as they can. Why, you'd think home was some kind of a prison place! A man comes home and eats his dinner and wants to get right out again, and if he doesn't, his wife wants to go out and he must go with her. And if somebody isn't home to
